Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BARN SWALLOWS.

"People think it is quite wonderful to see a house built or a building going up or something like that," said the Barn Swallow.

"You Are Very Modest."

"But I don't see anything so wonderful about it. The people who build know the building business, that is all.

"Of course when I spoke of a building going up, I meant a building which was being built. I didn't mean a building flying up in the air as we fly, of course."

"Of course I understand you," said the Queen of the Fairies, who had come very early one morning to pay a call on the Barn Swallows.

A number of the other fairies had come too.

"I think you are very modest," said the Queen of the Fairies, "for you build very clever nests. They are so well put together."

"We're glad you admire them," said the Barn Swallow, "for we always like to build the same kind. We don't like to change the style of building.

"People do that but we don't. You know, one year they talk about their old Colonial styles and then another year they speak of brick houses, and then they talk about bungalows, and they are always changing.

"Perhaps that is not quite true when I say they are always changing, for I suppose it is only once in a while that they change.

"But what I do mean to say is that the style changes and with us the style never changes."

"Won't you tell me how you build your nest?" asked the Queen of the Fairies of the Barn Swallow who had been talking.

"Gladly," said the Barn Swallow.

"We are all eager to hear, too," said the other fairies. "Yes, we are very anxious to hear, for we have always admired your nests too."

"It is good of you all to say kind things to us," said the Barn Swallow. "I always like to hear pleasant things and after all I think everyone does, birds or people."

"Of course they do," said the Fairy Queen, "and I've been telling the Fairy Wondrous Secrets that she might get some of her helpers or workers to do up some packages of that secret.

"For it seems to be a secret.

"So few seem to know how much happier it makes creatures to tell them the pleasant things about them. A little deserved praise never hurts anyone; it never does, I'm sure."

"And I've also asked the Fairy Wondrous Secrets to put in a little word or two about how much we can all do if we are encouraged and thought well of rather than scolded.

"Yes, we can all do better for those who think we're capable of doing better.

"But continue about how you build your nest."

"We make our nests in the shape of a very deep saucer as you can see and as you have seen. We take and roll it up in little balls, just as builders have their pieces of brick to put into a house.

"Then we must get those balls of mud fastened together, and we dampen them or moisten them so they stick together. And then we line our nests with feathers and make them soft and downy and pleasant."

"They're wonderful nests," said the Queen of the Fairies again.

"And, too, I want to tell you how greatly I've admired seeing you fly. You dart so quickly and then you rise up so fast again. Your flying is very beautiful to behold.

"Eager to Hear."

"And your reddish brown throat and face is very pleasing to look at, Barn Swallow, and your tan waistcoat and blue-gray coat are very smart.

"The touches of white to your very fork-shaped tail add a great deal, too. Yes, Barn Swallow, I'm an admirer of you and of your family."

"And you're so good to tell us so," said the Barn Swallow. "It cheers us up so much and it will not make us conceited. Not a bit of it, for we will want to be worthy of your admiration and your friendship."

SUCCULENT SALADS.

Salads using lettuce for the main portion of the salad should not be mixed until just before serving to insure the crispness of the lettuce. Le-t-t-u-c-e should be washed, drained and wrapped in a thin cloth. Old curtains, good for nothing else, make fine salad cloths. Wrap the lettuce in the cloth and lay in the ice chest, then it will be always ready.

Tomato and Cucumber Salad.—A very simple but attractive salad is one arranged on a long dish or platter. Place the sliced cucumbers in overlapping slices and a few tomatoes also sliced and arranged in the same manner. Let each serve himself taking one or both. Pass the dressing with the salad.

Pear Salad.—Cut peeled and quartered pears into eighths and arrange on lettuce with a little chopped apple and celery. Sprinkle with shredded almonds and serve with a rich mayonnaise dressing.

Pineapple and Cheese Salad.—Place a ring of pineapple on a crisp leaf of curly lettuce and fill the center with a ball of cream cheese softened with cream and sprinkled with paprika. Serve with a mayonnaise or boiled dressing.

When the canned pineapple is used, as is the common custom, the juice thickened slightly and mixed with olive oil and a dash of lemon juice makes a very palatable dressing to serve with the salad.

Cucumber Boats.—Peel long cucumbers and shape in the form of a boat hollowed out. Sprinkle with seasoning and fill with salmon mixed with the chopped portion taken from the centers. Serve on lettuce with any desired salad dressing.

New Beet Salad.—Chop new beets very fine and mix with a dressing colored pink with the liquor of the beets. Season with chopped onion and the usual seasonings. Serve on head lettuce with a spoonful of the dressing on top of the salad.

Swallowed Cigaret Holder.

Loo Va Lee, a Chinese boy of ten, was taken to the Shanghai hospital, a few weeks ago after "swallowing" a cigaret holder 2½ inches long, ⅜ inches in diameter at the wider end and ¼ inch at the lower end, with a linen band ⅛ inch in diameter. Examination showed that this object had lodged in his windpipe and that all his breathing was being done through it. An effort to get hold of the cigaret holder with forceps and pull it out failed, so the surgeon opened the boy's throat, got hold of the lower end and withdrew it that way.

Give the Boy a Chance.

"What have you named your baby, Rastus?"

"Sam Pro Tem Johnson, sah."

"What's the Pro Tem for?"

"To show that the name is only temporary, sah. We kinder thought Sam might like to choose his own name when he growed up, so we put in de Pro Tem as a warning to de public."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

JOSEPH E. RANKIN'S RIDE TO SAVE HIS COMRADES

One of the greatest rides in frontier history was that of Joseph E. Rankin, a scout with Maj. T. T. Thornburgh, when that officer was ambushed and killed by the Ute Indians September 29, 1879, and his command surrounded on the Milk river in northwestern Colorado. When Capt. J. S. Payne of the Fifth cavalry took command of the beleaguered troops and called for volunteers to ride for help, Rankin was the first to offer himself.

All of the horses in the command had been wounded, but, taking one of the least injured, Rankin made a dash along the back trail and succeeded in getting through the Indian lines. Then in the darkness he headed for Rawlings, Wyo., 170 miles away. The next morning he met a party of soldiers bringing up a cattle herd for Thornburgh, exchanged horses and pressed on.

His new mount soon failed him and he was forced to continue his journey on foot. Luckily he soon reached a hay camp and there obtained another mount. On this horse he rode wearily into Rawlings with his news that evening. He had crossed three mountain ranges, had led his horses over trails too rough to ride in the darkness or because the animals were too tired to carry him and he had covered the distance of 170 miles in exactly 24 hours.

Troops were at once put into motion to rescue Payne. Col. Wesley Merritt, with four troops of the Fifth cavalry reached Rawlings on the morning of October 2. Rankin immediately offered his services as guide and by noon Merritt's command was on its way. When they camped at midnight, they had covered 40 miles.

It was the morning of October 4. Eighty miles away Payne and his comrades were holding off the Utes and praying for the arrival of help. He knew that his colonel would spare no effort to come to his rescue and he believed it just barely possible that Merritt would reach him by dawn of October 5.

It was a custom in the Fifth cavalry for one troop of the regiment to guide another into camp at night by sounding "officers' call." Surrounded by his wounded men, Payne lay in the trenches they had dug, listening eagerly as the first streaks of light appeared in the east. Suddenly the notes of a bugle were heard and "officers' call" floated out on the morning air.

In a few minutes the Utes were retreating sullenly before the steady advance of Merritt's dust-covered troopers. Rankin's ride of 170 miles over the roughest country in America and his faithful guiding of Merritt's men had saved Payne and his comrades.

Dogs Trained to Smuggle.

The Franco-Belgian frontier has long been a happy hunting ground of the smuggler, both amateur and professional. In the customs museum at Lille is a collection of exhibits which give a vivid idea of the tricks employed by smugglers.

There are chairs, brushes, pitchforks, masons' hods, widows' mourning bonnets, wheelbarrows, saws and boots, all hollowed out for stowing away tobacco. There are stacks of government papers concealed in a zinc tobacco receptacle, hollow roulette wheels in which coffee was smuggled, and workmen's drinking cans with only a few inches of liquor in a little vessel beneath the cork, the rest of the can being intended for tobacco.

There are numerous examples of spiked armor, spiked collars and harness furnished with a number of sharp spears, worn by the dogs trained to dash across from Belgium at night, and thus protected against the customs dogs trained to chase them.

WIFE TAKES HOME MAN WHO FORGOT

Sunday Morning Mrs. James F. Bennett of Syracuse Returned Home With Her Husband—He Applied For Aid To Police Saying He Had Lost His Memory.

Mrs. James F. Bennett of Syracuse reached Kingston Saturday evening in search of her husband, the man with the lost memory, who had applied to Chief of Police J. Allan Wood for assistance in locating his wife and his home. Sunday morning they called at police headquarters to say goodbye and thank the police for their aid in locating the wife and informing her that her husband was in Kingston.

Last week while Officer Entrott was on lower Broadway he was accosted by a stranger who said he had forgotten both his name and where he lived, and that he would like to relieve his wife's anxiety as to his whereabouts. He informed Chief Wood that his father-in-law, Addison Kitchen, was a contractor in Newtown, Pa.

Chief Wood sent a telegram to Mr. Kitchen asking for his daughter's address which was furnished and the chief communicated with her receiving word Saturday noon that she would be in Kingston that day.

While trying to locate Mr. Bennett's wife Mr. Bennett was cared for at the Kingston City Hospital.

The investigation brought out the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Bennett had lately been residents of Newburgh, residing in furnished rooms there. When the wife did not find him at Newburgh she had gone to her former address at Syracuse where she was located by Chief Wood.

LAUCK PRAISES LABOR BOARD WORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Despite the fact that a strike vote is now being taken by the railroad brotherhoods because of wage reductions ordered by the Railroad Labor Board, W. Lauck, who has been consulting economist of the railroad unions, today paid high tribute to the work of the board and gave it credit for stabilizing railroad labor conditions.

The recent decision of the board relative to punitive overtime, Lauck said, has been displeasing to both the railroad employes and the railroad managements. He expressed confidence, however, that the decisions of the board had forestalled labor troubles on the railroads despite the fact that the brotherhoods are now taking a strike ballot.

GREGORY COMES TO THE RESCUE

The problem of power for the cider mill at the Farm and Home Bureau picnic on Wednesday has been solved by Gregory & Co., the Broadway dealers in house furnishings, coming to the rescue of E. W. Rathaway, and loaning him the electric motor from their pickling room. It was feared that a gasoline engine, the noise of which would drown the musical gurgle of the cider, would have to be used, but with the loan of an electric motor, even this slight drawback has been avoided. Gregory & Co. will exhibit an electric washer on the picnic grounds. This washer is a wonder.

HOSPITAL CROWDED

With Over 30 Patients—All Beds Are Filled.

The Kingston City Hospital has every bed occupied, and the corps of five nurses are kept on the jump day and night attending to the patients. There are a number of nurses on the sick list which accounts for the fact that but five are on active duty at the present time. The hospital has accommodations for between 40 to 45 patients, and it had been necessary to install extra beds. In some of the private rooms it had been necessary to place two patients at the same time. Today there were 31 patients in the hospital, and last week there were 35.

TAX COLLECTION COST INCREASES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Amusement-loving America spent nearly a billion dollars during the fiscal year 1921 for theatrical entertainment, according to statistics made public today by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair. The ten per cent tax collection on theatres and places of entertainment during the fiscal year just closed amounted to $89,725,905, Blair announced.

Total tax collections during the year were $4,595,000,765, as compared with $5,407,590,251 in the previous year. With the decrease in tax collections, the cost of collection advanced from 55 cents to 81 cents for each $100 collected, Commissioner Blair stated.

Income and profit taxes yielded $3,225,790,653, or seventy percent of the total tax revenue. The same taxes yielded $3,956,936,003 in 1920.

During the year collections under the Volstead and National prohibition act were $2,152,083 as compared with $641,029 in the previous year. It is also estimated by Commissioner Blair that close to $2,500,000 was collected by the department of justice in fines and penalties for violation of the prohibition act.

Tobacco netted $255,218,499 and headed the list of miscellaneous taxes. Freight transportation taxes yielded $140,019,977 and passenger transportation taxes netted $97,481,896. Milady's toilette netted Uncle Sam $5,800,768 in taxes on cosmetics, perfumes and proprietary articles, while the chewing public paid $1,332,177 in taxes on chewing gum.

New York was the greatest revenue producing state, paying taxes of approximately $1,000,000,000 while Pennsylvania was second with tax payments of $488,000,000.

Edith Roberts in "Luring Lips" at the Auditorium tonight is the story of a woman's sacrifice to prove that her husband is not a thief. How she plays with fire to secure evidence which would release the only man she loved from prison; his doubt of her and the eventual realization of her goodness and love makes a strong and appealing photoplay. Tuesday Eileen Percy in "The Maid of the West" a story of a cowgirl's thrilling experiences.

One of the features of the performance is a snappy chorus of comely young misses who are well versed in the art of singing and dancing.

TEAM RUNS AWAY.

Chichester Boy Cut When Wagon Turns Over.

Chichester, Aug. 29.—On Saturday afternoon a team of horses owned by Emery Okos of this place ran away. No one was seriously hurt although a son of Mr. Okos, was cut and bruised around the mouth. The two-seated wagon turned completely over, smashing the top, wheels, and some of the frame. It is said that the top saved the occupants of the wagon from being bodly injured. A break in a part of the harness started one of the horses and caused the run away. One horse had its leg torn and cut.

Selected for Health Experiment.

Selection of the town of Mansfield and the county of Richmond, Ohio, as the location of its five year experiment in the development of children, is announced by the national child health council. The Ohio communities were picked from 36, including Kingston, which sought the distinction, as most nearly complying with the qualifications of a typical American community.

Grape Prices in Doubt.

Grapes are the most uncertain fruit on the market just now as regards price, says the Marlborough Record. Growers all know the crop is short and expect the demand to be strong with consequent high prices, but buyers, of course, are holding off and predict that prices will not be exceptionally high.

A Long Swim.

Willie Gade, 22, Danish swimming champion, announces that on September 2 she will start to swim from Albany to New York in the Hudson, stating in the water 14 hours a day until she has completed the 140 mile trip.

EVERYBODY COME TO THE BIG PICNIC

No Membership, Invitation, Ticket Or Fee Is Required To Attend The Farm Bureau Gathering In Forsyth Park.

A number of timid and pessimistic persons in this city are, it seems, in doubt whether they will be permitted to attend the Farm and Home Bureau and Chamber of Commerce picnic in Forsyth Park on Wednesday, as they are not members of either body. For their benefit, The Freeman this morning asked Chairman Hathaway whether any special qualification was required in order to be able to attend the picnic.

"Everybody welcome, the more the merrier, and everything free except the food and drink sold by the ladies of the Home Bureau, the hot dogs sold by Mr. Davis and the cider I am going to make with Mr. Bunn's cider mill," said Mr. Hathaway.

"They can see the baseball games and the other athletic events, listen to the band music and hear Col. Roosevelt's speech and do any darn thing they please, so long as they behave themselves, and it won't cost a cent. No tickets, no invitations, no red tape. The freedom not only of Forsyth Park is theirs but, when Forsyth Park overflows they can fill up the Kingston fair grounds with automobiles and people. The state troopers will be there to direct automobile traffic and aid the city police in keeping the parks clear of fakers.

"This picnic is going to be clean —no barkers (unless it be Davis's hot dogs), no fakers, no peddlers, no midway and no games. Just a get-together of country and city folks, with plenty to eat and drink for sale at moderate prices."

QUOTATIONS AT PUBLIC MARKET

There was another large attendance at the public market on Field Court this morning. It is expected that Tuesday's market will be even larger for there are a number of producers who do not come to the market on Mondays as they do not pick produce on Sundays.

The wholesale quotations today were:

Apples—50 to 60 cents per basket.
Tomatoes—50 to 60 cents per basket.
Peaches—75 cents to $1.75 per basket.
Green beans—$1.50 per bushel.
Wax beans—$1.50 per bushel.
Green peppers—$1 per bushel.
Red peppers—$3 per bushel.
Potatoes—$6.50 per barrel.
Eggplant—$1.50 per dozen.
Carrots—30 to 35 cents per dozen bunches.
Beets—35 to 40 cents per dozen bunches.
Sweet corn—$1.25 to $1.50 per 100.

START SMILEY MEMORIAL.

Lay Cornerstone of Tower at Sky Top Tuesday Morning.

At 11 o'clock Tuesday morning the cornerstone of the Albert K. Smiley Memorial Tower at Sky Top near Lake Mohonk will be laid with appropriate ceremonies. The cost of the memorial, which will be of stone, is estimated at $10,000, with $6,425 already subscribed, and is to be a testimonial of the high esteem and reverence in which the guests held Mr. Smiley, says the committee in its appeal for the $3,575 still necessary to insure the completion of the structure, which will be an observation and watch tower which will stand for centuries.

Confetti and Songster Tonight.

A big confetti dance will be held this evening at the Kingston Point Casino. During the evening some of Kingston's best talent will render popular selections. The jazz music will be furnished by Balfe's orchestra of eight pieces with Paul Zucca and his banjo. The orchestra will render the following late New York hits: "Listening," "Tullman Porter Blues," "Oh, Me, Oh, My," "Ain't We Got Fun," "Na," and several others. The American Legion Post of Poughkeepsie will come up to the Point on a moonlight sail, and a large crowd from Saugerties is expected at the dance. Dancing will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Loss On Albany Auto Thefts.

The Aetna Fire Insurance announces that it will discontinue insuring automobiles in Albany against fire and theft. Other insurance companies are expected to follow suit. Albany is said to be one of the worst districts in the country on this kind of risks.

Fell Down Stairs.

William Hills, a negro, is in the Kingston City Hospital with a fractured rib. According to his story on Sunday afternoon he was chased by another negro who was armed with a shovel. He ran away and fell down stairs on a boarding shack on the Hutton brickyard.

Shandaken Robbery.

Two young men named James and Peter, robbed the rooms of two boarders at Seeley's boarding house at Shandaken, Friday, getting away with about $100 and much clothing.

GERMAN TURMOIL GROWS GREATER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 29—The flames of political strife unloosened by the murder of Dr. Mathias Erzberger, leaped high today when the full news of yesterday's demonstration here and in other towns was told and when Chancellor Wirth summoned his cabinet to extraordinary session to discuss the internal crisis.

Two working men were killed and a third mortally wounded in a clash between reds and monarchists yesterday afternoon at Potsdam.

That old Kaiser-town bristled with uniforms of men and officers of the old army, including some famous generals, who had defied the government's order forbidding a demonstration in celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of Tannenberg. At the same time, Potsdam swarmed with radicals who had heeded the summons of the Rote Fahne to make a counter demonstration.

Police fired into a throng of working men when the latter resisted an attempt to throw their red flags into the canal.

The inter-party strife and the bitterness continues to grow hourly in intensity and the menace of a cabinet crisis loomed still larke today. Moderate elements of all parties were bending their energies to prevent it, realizing that nothing could be more disastrous to Germany at this moment, when the war-crippled industries are just beginning to regain their bearing and when the league of nations council is about to make a final decision of Upper Silesia.

Meanwhile the investigation into Erzberger's assassination continues. The town of Offenburg, Baden, where the Centrist leader and former Finance Minister was slain while walking on a high road in the Black Forest, was thick with police, with and without uniforms. The best brains of the German secret service police have been dispatched to the Baden city to track down the murderers. Thus far the elaborate inquiry has been fruitless. The two students who were arrested Saturday on suspicion, were released.

The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of "political murder."

It was found at the inquest that the shots that killed the Centrist leader were fired from two different revolvers.

The latest clue which the police were investigating today was that an unknown voice telephoned to the newspaper Adische Presse at noon of the day of the murder—last Friday—asking if there was any information about Erzberger, whose assassination had not yet been discovered at that time.

The newspaper war over the sensational political murder raged on with fury. Gloomy predictions were made on all sides. Vorwaerts, the government's own mouthpiece said:

"Only brutal ruthlessness can now save Germany from a bloody civil war."

The Catholic organ, Germania, again demanded the suppression of all nationalistic holidays, which the militarists are using for purposes of agitation the paper charges. The royalist, Kreuz-Zeitung, counters this with, "The nationalistic youths know how to protect their rights with a strong will."

Erzberger's "home town," Biberbach, having offered to erect a monument and donate a "grave of honor" to its most famous son, the funeral arrangements were changed by the widow today. The murder victim will be buried in Biberbach on Wednesday, instead of Berlin.

A funeral ceremony for the dead politician yesterday as addressed by ex-Chancellor Fehrenbach and Minister of Posts Giesbert.

SAFETY DEPOSIT ROBBED.

Chicago Police Hold Five Men for $250,000 Robbery.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Five men—two watchmen and three others whose identity the police are concealing—are held today in connection with the robbery of the Security Safety Deposit vaults in the Masonic Temple. Loot obtained by four men who participated in the robbery is estimated at as high as $250,000.

Ernest Weber and Milton Jonas, guards, are held. Chief of Detectives Hughes declares they have told contradictory stories.

According to the police, the four men approached Weber, the outer guard at the vault, and one of them asked to rent a safe deposit vault. Weber accepted payment for the vault and gave the men a card admitting them. Inside the men are said to have drawn guns bound and gagged Jonas and proceeded to break open fourteen boxes with hammers and chisels.

Upon his arrival at Edinburgh the premier conferred with Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, who is in that city.

Belfast, Aug 29—There was an outbreak of revolver firing here early today, but no casualties were reported.

CARS CRASH ON THE BOULEVARD

A Studebaker automobile owned by a man named Thomas from Stamford, Conn., and a Paige sedan owned by Joseph Blitzer of West Hoboken, N. J., figured in an accident on the Ashokan boulevard Sunday. Just how the accident happened is not known. In attempting to pass on the road the two cars came together and the Studebaker was wrecked and Mrs. Thomas was slightly injured. She was brought to Kingston and taken to Dr. Kemble's Sanitarium on Clinton avenue where today it was reported that her injuries were not serious.

There is a difference of opinion as to how it happened. Blitzer, who was driving the Paige, was coming down the boulevard with a party of friends when he says the Studebaker came up in the rear and attempted to pass his car but struck his right rear fender. The impact threw the Studebaker around in the road and out in the ditch and over the bank.

After the accident Blitzer waited around for an hour for an officer to appear and when informed that he would have to wait a long time before an officer appeared on the Ashokan boulevard he reported the accident to District Attorney Traver. According to the story told the district attorney Blitzer was driving along in the middle of the road when without warning he felt a jar when the other car struck him. He was of the opinion that the other car had attempted to pass him on the right.

Another version of the accident is that the Paige passed the Studebaker and cut in short after passing and was struck.

The Studebaker was hauled back on the road by the wrecking crew from the Stuyvesant Garage and brought to this city for repairs.

TO CONFER ON UNEMPLOYMENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 29—Steps by the administration to prevent a winter of suffering due to unemployment were going forward today.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover was completing plans for a national unemployment conference, which will be called by the president within the next few weeks. The president it is understood, has directed other cabinet members to consider the question of unemployment in order that the whole question and method of remedying it, may be worked out in the cabinet next week.

It is the plan of Secretary Hoover to have the unemployment conference in session during the early part of September in order that representatives of large industry, labor and the government may cooperate in an effort to produce the maximum efficiency. A survey of the unemployment situation will be made bby the conference and it is expected that some measures of redistribution of labor will be worked out.

The president's future course with regard to idleness will hinge largely on the outcome of the conference. The president has advised members of congress that he is concerned over the situation and that he might deem it wise to call upon congress for action. If the forthcoming conference makes recommendations for legislative action, it is expected that the president will go before congress during the latter part of September and ask relief.

GOT THE LODGES MIXED.

Kingston Lodge of Elks, Not Masons, is Assessed for $24,000.

In the list of properties in this city assessed at $10,000 or more which was published in The Freeman Saturday, an error was made in regard to which should have read:

"Kingston Lodge, No. 550, B. P. O. Elks, $24,000."

The error was discovered by The Freeman after the papers had been published and after it was too late to make a correction. The error also was brought to the attention of The Freeman by officers of both Kingston Lodge, No. 10, F and A. M., and by Kingston Lodge, No. 550, B. P. O. Elks, both of whom asked that it be corrected.

GRIFFITH TO HEAD IRISH DELEGATES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 29.—An unconfirmed report was circulated here today that Arthur Griffith is to replace Eamonn de Valera as head of the Sinn Fein delegation when it goes to London again to confer with Premier Lloyd-George.

The above report is significant not only in that it appears to take for granted as a foregone conclusion that the Irish plenipotentiaries will go to London again, but because of the implied "shake-up" in the high councils of the Sinn Fein. Arthur Griffith has been for years contrasted with de Valera, the more aggressive and more radical. He is generally credited with being the real founder of the Sinn Fein. When de Valera was in America, he was "Acting President of the Irish Republic." Less scholarly than de Valera, he is more direct and his personality appeals more to the masses than does that of his reserved and austere chief.

Throughout the peace negotiations between Ireland and the British government the more radical elements of the Sinn Fein party have opposed de Valera's moderate diplomacy and have looked to Griffiths to make that opposition assert itself in the decisive councils. If the report is true that Griffiths is to replace de Valera, it will mean the first real reverse of the Sinn Fein chieftain at the hands of his party and will undoubtedly foreshadow a more aggressive policy in the conferences—provided they are resumed.

BIKE TOO SLOW FOR AUTOMOBILE

And Sergeant Phinney Overhauled Fleeing Woodstock Youth at Esopus This Morning—Accused of Escaping With Milk Collection Monday.

About 8 o'clock this morning Sergeant Hanley, who is acting chief of the police department while Chief Wood is away on his vacation, received a telephone call from Granville Yerry of Woodstock, who said that Thomas Donald, 16 years old, who was employed by him in making milk collections from the customers on his milk route in that place, had run away with both the money collected and the collection book. Mr Yerry said the amount of the money was between $30 and $40.

Sergeant Phinney was assigned to the job of apprehending young Donald who had come towards Kingston on his bicycle. The sergeant learned that a boy answering Donald's description had been seen crossing the Skillypot to Sleightsburgh. "Sime" Wood and the trusty Franklin of the police department were called into service and they set sail after the fleeing youth.

While Donald may be a speedy bike rider he could not hope to exceed the speed of the police car with "Sime" at the helm, and he was overhauled at Esopus, and Donald and wheel were brought back to police headquarters and Mr. Yerry notified. When searched by the police all Donald had with him was about $4.

Park Cars on Fair Grounds.

The directors of the Kingston Fair Grounds, Inc., have thrown open the park for the use of automobilists Wednesday who attend the big Farm Bureau and Chamber of Commerce picnic at Forsyth Park. Parking space at Forsyth Park is limited and as it is expected that there will be hundreds of automobiles in town that day the action taken on the part of the Kingston Fair Grounds directors will certainly be welcomed. There is space of at least 500 cars on the Fair Grounds adjoining Forsyth Park. No one need stay away for fear of having no place to park their car for ample space will be provided.

Hungarians Fight Austrians.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 29—Bitter fighting has broken out between Hungarian soldiers and Austrian gendarmes over the town of Oedenburg, according to a dispatch from Vienna today. Serious losses have been sustained on both sides. The Hungarians are led by Colonel Prohaska and Hegyes, both famous war veterans. The fighting began when the Austrian gendarmes started to occupy Oedenburg, which is a town much disputed between Austria and Hungary. Veritable battles were raging at last accounts at Aroh-dorf and Parkarfd.

MRS. ROSENBAUM NOT A SUICIDE

Death Of Former Rosendale Woman In New York Was Due To Natural Causes—Funeral On Tuesday At Rosendale.

Mrs. Mae Jordan Rosenbaum, whose family resides near Rosendale, was found dead in her apartment on the Seventh floor of No. 340 West Eighty-Sixth street, New York city, at noon Saturday and in the opinion of the authorities she had been dead six days.

The discovery of her body was brought about through Miss Rae B. Edmondson of No. 214 Riverside Drive, a friend, who last saw her alive the previous Monday evening. Miss Edmondson tried repeatedly to reach Mrs. Rosenbaum on the telephone but her calls were not answered. On Saturday she visited Oscar Christopherson, superintendent of the apartment building, and told him she was afraid something had happened to her friend. He entered the apartment with the aid of a duplicate key and found Mrs. Rosenbaum dead in the bathroom.

On a table in the reception room the policeman who was summoned found two letters, one of which was signed. The other letter was addressed to "Dear Will," and requested that he return $3,000 to her. The letter stated that the writer was behind in her rent and that if she did not receive the money in a short time she would have to give up her apartment. The policeman quoted the letter as saying in part: "Your neglect and the wrongs you have done me were the reasons I divorced you."

The other letter, signed with the initials of the dead woman, was addressed to "My good friend," and spoke of having received a letter from the addresses at The Commodore Hotel several days before, and stated: "I have experienced an unexpected and heavy financial drawback since I saw you."

Dr. Benjamin Schwartz, acting chief medical examiner, and the police were of the opinion that death was caused by poison. The policeman was unable to find a vial or other container, but Dr. Schwartz ordered the body sent to the morgue for autopsy. Dr. Schwartz, who performed the autopsy, said he could not determine the cause of death until analysis of the vital organs had been made. He expressed the opinion that a quick-acting poison had been taken by Mrs. Rosenbaum. Later it was found that death was due to natural causes.

Mrs. Rosenbaum divorced her husband, Dr. William Rosenbaum, about a year ago. He called at the apartment at the request of friends of the dead woman after the discovery of the body and assumed responsibility for the funeral.

Search of Mrs. Rosenbaum's effects revealed that she had a little more than five dollars in money and jewelry valued at about $1,500.

On Sunday it was learned that Mrs. Rosenbaum was formerly a model for Charles Dana Gibson, the famous artist. Dr. Rosenbaum, whom she divorced, is one of the most expert tennis players in the United States.

The body of Mrs. Rosenbaum arrived in Kingston this afternoon and was taken by Undertaker Leo V. Grogan to the home of her mother, Mrs. Margaret Jordan, at Maple Hill, near Rosendale. The funeral will take place from the home of her mother on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock and from St. Peter's Church, Rosendale, at ten o'clock, where a solemn high Mass of requiem will be celebrated. Interment will be at Rosendale.

Hurt by Gas Explosion.

Armand Abramovitz of 195 Albany avenue, luckily escaped being made totally blind on Sunday. He went to the cellar of the Abramovitz residence, formerly the George J. Smith mansion, and lighted the gas in a heater. A loud report followed, frightening the members of the household, they thinking the house had been blown up. Young Mr. Abramovitz was quite badly burned about the eyes and was given attention quickly by Dr. Gillett and later by Dr. A. C. Gamm. It is expected that the eyesight will not be impaired.

MANY BEADS USED

Embroidery Plays Large Part in Decorating Dresses.

Colors Used to Match Garment—Thin Black Frock Always Popular for Summer.

A survey of the shop windows, observes a writer in the Christian Science Monitor, reveals many new and interesting features of the afternoon dress, the most notable being, perhaps, the extensive use of bead embroidery, which plays a very large part in the decoration of the dresses of this season. Some of the dresses have the entire bodice bead embroidered, while a deep band also decorates the skirt reaching far up in uneven design and leaving only about one-third of the dress plain.

Others have bead motifs embroidered here and there on the dress. The beads used are often the same color as the dress, such as bronze beads for brown satin or crepe de chine, jet for black charmeuse or georgette, and steel or iridescent beads on gray.

The thin black dress for summer weather is one of which we never seem to tire, for season after season it finds its way into the wardrobe of many women. Its mode of expression, however, varies considerably from year to year and this may be one reason for its perennial youth. Another, of course, is its suitability for many occasions and yet another, that a very large number of women recognize the fact that they really look their best in black. Jet embroidery is seen a good deal on the black afternoon dresses this year, sometimes being embroidered straight on the dress, or bands of bead trimming may be used.

One dress is composed of black crepe georgette with a long bodice, short sleeves and a skirt with four deep tucks. Two bands of bead trimming decorate the dress, passing over the shoulders, caught into loops at the waist, back and front, and hanging slightly below the skirt, disappear under the hem. The trimming is made up of jet and cut steel beads, its glistening effect making a pleasing contrast to the dull finish of the georgette.

The hat worn with this dress is of dull silver tissue, in color matching exactly the steel of the beads. It is lined with black and over the silver tissue is draped black lace which is studded here and there with jet beads. Two silver roses hold the drapery in place. Another rather new and very smart black dress is made of crepe georgette and moire ribbon. The bodice is made of georgette, quite plain, with the neck and short sleeves bound with moire, while the skirt is composed entirely of bands of moire ribbon about four inches wide placed about two inches apart on the georgette. Cire ribbon could be used in the same way with equal success. A dress like this could, of course, only be worn by some one tall and slender, but the same materials could be quite successfully arranged with the ribbon going down in stripes for those of larger dimensions instead of the barred effect.

The black taffeta frocks with their skirts encircled by formal little ribbon ruches are very picturesque, and it is quite unusual to see black taffeta unaccompanied by white organdie. Frills are edged with it, or it will appear at the neck and wrists in little plaited ruffles. Beautifully embroidered lingerie collars and cuffs are much worn with black taffeta, showing that there are still faithful adherents to the early Victorian mode.

KINGSTON, N. Y., AUG. 29, 1921.

LENINE'S CONFESSION.

In the earlier part of 1918 a Swiss student of German blood attending college in this country could not be convinced that the German army was losing ground and later absolutely refused to credit the news that Germany was being beaten. He contended that the German army was the most perfect in the world and therefore invincible, that the American newspapers did not tell the truth and that when the real facts became known to us there would be a "great shock." He stubbornly kept this up until the armistice was signed and the preliminaries of the Versailles treaty were under discussion, after which he fell silent, evidently troubled for the first time with any sort of misgivings.

Doubtless there is a similar attitude among the American friends of the Bolshevist revolution in Russia toward the "confession" of Lenine announced by the Paris Matin, for these have steadfastly asserted that the "capitalist-controlled" American press was persistently and outrageously lying about the situation in Russia. Nevertheless the alleged confession of Lenine may be regarded as a logical culmination of much that has been reported before and it is of a character to cause painful misgivings among our parlor Bolshevists. According to the Matin, it has come into possession of a letter written by Lenine to an old friend in which he says that the revolution has failed, that the communist State which he tried to establish was a dream and a chimera, that he made miscalculations and mistakes in his "estimate of class consciousness," that "the Russian workers and peasants have betrayed their own interests," that he still rules only because of "the efforts of the party which is giving all its energy to keep the power in our hands," that even the party is "breaking up" because of petty jealousies and personal interests, that all he asks now is time to find out where his "theories were wrong and to construct new ones," and further:

As for me I am tired. The inefficiency of the people around me and the bourgeois tendencies which gnaw more and more at the organism of the party are wearing me down. Governmental work is impossible in the way it is carried on here. Our young bureaucrats have completely inherited the errors of their predecessors and have even widened the gulf between the governors and the governed. Our gamble on the collective instinct which ought to hold together the members of the party was a mistake. The collective instinct of the peasants and the workers has never justified the hopes we placed in it and has completely failed.

All this was foreshadowed long since and will cause no surprise among non-partisan observers, but it will take some time for the American friends of the Russian revolution to face the inevitable. Like the Swiss student referred to above, they may be expected to hope on and trust on. As he waited for the treaty of Versailles before he permitted his faith in the German army to be shaken, so they are likely to wait for the exile of Lenine and the possible restoration of the imperial family before they can begin to recover from their illusions.

The dangerous practice indulged in by many automobilists of driving through the country at night with only one headlight burning has resulted in many minor accidents and will eventually result in a serious accident. The practice is a violation of the highway law and one which should be stopped before some serious accident results. Any night dozens of cars may be seen on the highways with one or the other of their lights extinguished. The safeguarding of the highways by State Police would seem to be of more importance than the seizure of vinegar.

With a Republican Congress and a Republican Executive striving to outdo each other in making a record for retrenchment and economy, the poor taxpayer stands a pretty good show to be the beneficiary. During the eight years of Democratic rule there was no competition to see who could reduce expenses most.

The investigation into the New York city government under the Tammany administration is uncovering a story of extravagance and official incompetence very much like the record of the regime at Washington from which the country was relieved on March 4th.

The Secretary of Labor estimates the number of persons out of employment in this country at 5,735,000, which approximates the highest record of the past. Under the circumstances labor's continuing stand for war-time wages is a remarkable phenomenon.

Can You Answer These Questions.

1. Will mistletoe hurt a tree it grows on?
2. Is there any truth in the fable of the pelican feeding its young with its own blood?
3. Do animals migrate like birds?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. What is the name of the little black-green bird, whose song is similar to the yellow warbler's, and which is slightly larger?

Impossible to reply accurately, with so little data. Question comes from the west, where warblers are found in almost forty varieties. It might be the black-poll warbler, Dendroica streata Forst, between 4 and 6 inches in lengh.

2. How many young are there in a skunk litter?

Usually from six to ten, which are born in summer. The skunk is counted the most prolific of the Mustelidae, or fetidscent group. The young remain with the parents through the winter following their birth. If taken very small, they can be tamed as pets, but are risky unless carefully managed.

3. Why are two rainbows often seen at the same time?

When you see two rainbows, you will notice the colors of the second are in reverse order from that of the first. The first bow is due to the rays of the sun falling upon the outer portions of the drops and suffering two refractions and one reflection before reaching the eye. The second bow is due to the rays falling on the inner side of the drops and suffering two refractions and two reflections.

DIDN'T SEE THE "MOB."

Trained Observer Failed to Find Disturbance at the Fair.

The statement furnished to The Freeman by the Rev. Dr. Rennetts C. Miller, representing the New York Civic League, describing what he purports to have taken place along the midway at the Ellenville fair on Thursday afternoon was read with amazement by The Freeman reporter who was in attendance there that afternoon. During the afternoon the reporter spent practically the entire time along the midway, where most of those who attended the fair were to be found, and where he met more acquaintances from various parts of the county than any other place on the fair grounds.

If the Rev. Dr. Miller is correct in his statement that "The closed concessionaires were angry and threatening, some of them cursed the reformer, other surrounded him till quite a mob kept him busy answering questions and facing disagreeable threats and insults," it was not apparent to the reporter, who had heard of the presence of the agent of the league and was on the lookout for any possible disturbance.

The choicest bit of the reverend agent's statement is that "after nearly an hour with the mob he escaped without any serious injury."

It may be that the agent thought that the crowds which continually were passing along the midway composed a "mob" which was seeking to do him "serious injury," but to the reporter of The Freeman who has attended the Ellenville fair many years the charge seems to be absolutely without foundation.

The thousands who attended the Ellenville fair on Thursday compose the class to which the men who earn their living by employment as agents of the Civic League and similar organizations appeal for funds at stated intervals. They will know how much credence to give statements issued by such organizations.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story
Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Jim was ready to start on his search for a new job when a tap at his door halted him. Miss Billings, his erstwhile employer, peeked in.

"I hate to see you going James. A man is needed so badly around the place. There are pipes leaking, the drains need cleaning, and—"

"You need a plumber!"

"The only one in town refuses to come because I haven't paid last winter's bill. Fifty-five dollars for thawing out pipes! I'll never pay it, and yet, there are many things that need attention."

"I dont know anything about plumbing," Jim remarked. "Once I did some soldering, and—"

"You'll do, James. I'll run down and shut off the water at once. There's a faucet in the bathroom that drips continually."

Jim lost the rest of her words for she was hurrying down the stairs to the cellar. He laid his coat and hat on the dresser and donned his overalls. "After all, it's a job, and that's what I need."

Miss Billings kept at his heels all day and watched him work. A new washer in the faucet stopped the leak. A piece of copper soldered onto the boiler put a stop to the stream of water that trickled continually to the floor. By noon of the second day, Jim thought he had completed all his tasks when he recalled Miss Billings's mention of the set-tubs in the cellar that would not drain.

He descended the stairs and tapped the pipes. Already the tubs were over half full of water, and a prodding with wire did not relieve the situation. Jim tinkered around, testing, turning bolts, not knowing just how to go to work. Suddenly a cap which he had been tampering with burst off, and a gush of water shot forth. Jim tried to fit the cap into the pipe but the force of the water behind was too great. He looked feverishly around for the shut-off, but Miss Billings had always attended to that and he could not find it in the dark cellar.

Still the water poured forth, spreading over the floor and soaking Jim. "I've got to stop this somehow," he groaned. "but how?"

"Shut off the water, Mr. Smarty!" Elsie stood on the stairs, laughing at his plight.

He glanced at the little maid who had been so disgruntled because of his lack of attention toward her. "Where is the shut-off?"

"Don't you know?"

"Would I be standing here with Niagara Falls pouring over me if I did?"

Elsie laughed again. "I'll bargain with you. There's a dance going on in the village tonight. If you'll take me, I'll shut off the water. If you won't—!"

"Well?"

"Miss Billings has gone to have tea with the parson's wife. I am going for a walk. You may spend your time watching the water rise."

"Elsie, you are a-a-"

"Do we go to the dance, Jim?"

The water was slapping coldly against Jims shins. He thought of Miss Billingss despair should she return to see the flooded cellar, and he succumbed. "How many dances, Elsie?" dispiritedly.

"As many as you care to give me."

"Make it one hundred per cent. I'll go the limit. Now, turn off the—no, wait a jiffy!" Jim flew to the further corner, a sudden intuition coming to him. He found the shut-off. "I guess that dance is all off."

Elsie said nothing, but disappointment was written all over her face as she turned away.

"No it isn't," Jim called to her. "We'll go, if you say the word."

"Do I? Oh, Jim!"

Out-Scotching The Scotch In Golf—White Felt Hats—Knitted Slip-On Jacket And Plaid Knickers—Ties Wit End And With All Sorts Of Ends—Kit Bags For Trip

New York, August 27

TIME was, and not so long ago, when Golf was dismissed by many of us with the ready sneer that it was the rich man's game or the old man's game. It is the rich man's game only in the sense that it yields rich rewards in health and relaxation. It is the old man's game in the sense that you must be well past middle life before you've begun to master the complexities of bogey, bogy and bunker. King James VI. of Scotland, the birthplace of golf, never swung his niblick on Blackheath with keener zest than clubs are swung today throughout the An ions. Though the get-up for golf began quite elaborately, it ended quite simply. Yet, you cannot sunder the game from its cestry. Scotch it was, is and always will be. Without knickers, and brogues it would be like Red Riding Hood without the W There have been important changes in the golf turnout, due to fact that some of the earlier g ments proved too heavy and bulky our climate. Elastic knitted jack have, in many instances, replaced N folk jackets. Knickers have beco wider and golf stockings have beco lighter. Many "crack" professio have gone in for "blazer" jack because of their grateful thinn Thick-soled shoes have been discar as overly clumsy. Dress for the ga has about come down to the prove ial irreducible minimum in weight weave.

Cooling The Fevered Brow

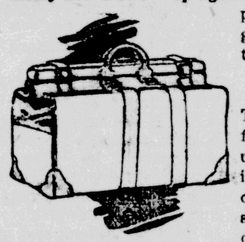
Among the newest hats for golf tennis are those of light white f one of which is portrayed in the sketch. It is blocked in the famil Alpine shape and may be worn w brim turned up or flipped down. crown has three air vents on each side to cool the fevered brow a blistering day. The hat ribbon and cravat are striped in the s colors. Similar hats are made of white flannel, duck or serv either in the round-crown or helmet shape.

No Sleeves—No Strain

One of the really smart golf get-ups of the season is illustrated abo The player wears no coat, but, instead, a 5-button, sleeveless knit jacket having a waist-seam and squarish flaps upon the side pockets. The kspels, provided with buttons, may be turned up to protect one against wind or rain. This jacket, you will notice, is slightly curved to waist. The full-spread knickers reveal the new plaid pattern effect, which is gaining in vogue. The cap has a flexible, pleated crown and a long visor, also new and spruce touch

Tie-dings From 'Varsity Towns

Bow-knot ties of fashionable cut are procurable in a broad ra of shapes—wide or narrow; square, round, pointed or forked of e The tie, reproduced in preceding paragraph, is the wide affair pecially made to fit a particular type of turn-down collar, that w a generous front opening and rounded corners. One knots this firmly and draws it up against the top of the collar band, now practice among collegians and the gions who would follow them even the extremes of folly.



"Your Old Kit Bag"

Travel has customs, but no fashio for the paramount thought must utility. Though the plebeian suit c is carried less than it used to be, cannot be outdone for light, practi service. The leather kit bag show double-handled and double-strapp with cushioned corners, is a smart and roomy piece of luggage, you undertake quite a bit of a trip.

Last-Minute Modes Of The Week

Soft hats and derbies for Autumn follow the lead of Springtime their low crowns and snug brims as worn in London and New Yor Morning waistcoats of brown or gray corduroy cloth will soon seen pairing off with sacque jackets.

Upon many soft hats the bow on the ribbon is set just back the centre, instead of directly in the middle.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BARN SWALLOWS.

"People think it is quite wonderful to see a house built or a building going up or something like that," said the Barn Swallow.

"You Are Very Modest."

"But I don't see anything so wonderful about it. The people who build know the building business, that is all.

"Of course when I spoke of a building going up, I meant a building which was being built. I didn't mean a building flying up in the air as we fly, of course."

"Of course I understand you," said the Queen of the Fairies, who had come very early one morning to pay a call on the Barn Swallows.

A number of the other fairies had come too.

"I think you are very modest," said the Queen of the Fairies, "for you build very clever nests. They are so well put together."

"We're glad you admire them," said the Barn Swallow, "for we always like to build the same kind. We don't like to change the style of building.

"People do that but we don't. You know, one year they talk about their old Colonial styles and then another year they speak of brick houses, and then they talk about bungalows, and they are always changing.

"Perhaps that is not quite true when I say they are always changing, for I suppose it is only once in a while that they change.

"But what I do mean to say is that the style changes and with us the style never changes."

"Won't you tell me how you build your nest?" asked the Queen of the Fairies of the Barn Swallow who had been talking.

"Gladly," said the Barn Swallow.

"We are all eager to hear, too," said the other fairies. "Yes, we are very anxious to hear, for we have always admired your nests too."

"It is good of you all to say kind things to us," said the Barn Swallow. "I always like to hear pleasant things and after all I think everyone does, birds or people."

"Of course they do," said the Fairy Queen, "and I've been telling the Fairy Wondrous Secrets that she might get some of her helpers or workers to do up some packages of that secret.

"For it seems to be a secret.

"So few seem to know how much happier it makes creatures to tell them the pleasant things about them. A little deserved praise never hurts anyone; it never does, I'm sure."

"And I've also asked the Fairy Wondrous Secrets to put in a little word or two about how much we can all do if we are encouraged and thought well of rather than scolded.

"Yes, we can all do better for those who think we're capable of doing better.

"But continue about how you build your nest."

"We make our nests in the shape of a very deep saucer as you can see and as you have seen. We take and roll it up in little balls, just as builders have their pieces of brick to put into a house.

"Then we must get those balls of mud fastened together, and we dampen them or moisten them so they stick together. And then we line our nests with feathers and make them soft and downy and pleasant."

"Eager to Hear."

"They're wonderful nests," said the Queen of the Fairies again.

"And, too, I want to tell you how greatly I've admired seeing you fly. You dart so quickly and then you rise up so fast again. Your flying is very beautiful to behold.

"And your reddish brown throat and face is very pleasing to look at, Barn Swallow, and your tan waistcoat and blue-gray coat are very smart.

"The touches of white to your very fork-shaped tail add a great deal, too. Yes, Barn Swallow, I'm an admirer of you and of your family."

"And you're so good to tell us so," said the Barn Swallow. "It cheers us up so much and it will not make us conceited. Not a bit of it, for we will want to be worthy of your admiration and your friendship."

SUCCULENT SALADS.

Salads using lettuce for the main portion of the salad should not be mixed until just before serving to insure the crispness of the lettuce. Le-t-t-u-c-e should be washed, drained and wrapped in a thin cloth. Old curtains, good for nothing else, make fine salad cloths. Wrap the lettuce in the cloth and lay in the ice chest, then it will be always ready.

Tomato and Cucumber Salad.—A very simple but attractive salad is one arranged on a long dish or platter. Place the sliced cucumbers in overlapping slices and a few tomatoes also sliced and arranged in the same manner. Let each serve himself taking one or both. Pass the dressing with the salad.

Pear Salad.—Cut peeled and quartered pears into eighths and arrange on lettuce with a little chopped apple and celery. Sprinkle with shredded almonds and serve with a rich mayonnaise dressing.

Pineapple and Cheese Salad.—Place a ring of pineapple on a crisp leaf of curly lettuce and fill the center with a ball of cream cheese softened with cream and sprinkled with paprika. Serve with a mayonnaise or boiled dressing.

When the canned pineapple is used, as is the common custom, the juice thickened slightly and mixed with olive oil and a dash of lemon juice makes a very palatable dressing to serve with the salad.

Cucumber Boats.—Peel long cucumbers and shape in the form of a boat hollowed out. Sprinkle with seasoning and fill with salmon mixed with the chopped portion taken from the centers. Serve on lettuce with any desired salad dressing.

New Beet Salad.—Chop new beets very fine and mix with a dressing colored pink with the liquor of the beets. Season with chopped onion and the usual seasonings. Serve on head lettuce with a spoonful of the dressing on top of the salad.

Swallowed Cigaret Holder.

Loo Ya Lee, a Chinese boy of ten, was taken to the Shanghai hospital, a few weeks ago after "swallowing" a cigaret holder 2½ inches long, ¾ inches in diameter at the wider end and ¾ inch at the lower end, with a stem band ½ inch in diameter. Examination showed that this object had lodged in his windpipe and that all his breathing was being done through it. An effort to get hold of the cigaret holder with forceps and pull it out failed, so the surgeon opened the boy's throat, got hold of the lower end and withdrew it that way.

Give the Boy a Chance.

"What have you named your baby, Rastus?"

"Sam Fox Tom Johnson, suh."

"What's the Fox Tom for?"

"De idear that the name is only temporary, suh. We kinder thought Sam might like to change his own name when he growed up, so we put in de Fox Tom as a warning to de public."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

JOSEPH E. RANKIN'S RIDE TO SAVE HIS COMRADES

One of the greatest rides in frontier history was that of Joseph E. Rankin, a scout with Maj. T. T. Thornburgh, when that officer was ambushed and killed by the Ute Indians September 29, 1879, and his command surrounded on the Milk river in northwestern Colorado. When Capt. J. S. Payne of the Fifth cavalry took command of the beleaguered troops and called for volunteers to ride for help, Rankin was the first to offer himself.

All of the horses in the command had been wounded, but, taking one of the least injured, Rankin made a dash along the back trail and succeeded in getting through the Indian lines. Then in the darkness he headed for Rawlings, Wyo., 170 miles away. The next morning he met a party of soldiers bringing up a cattle herd for Thornburgh, exchanged horses and pressed on.

His new mount soon failed him and he was forced to continue his journey on foot. Luckily he soon reached a hay camp and there obtained another mount. On this horse he rode wearily into Rawlings with his news that evening. He had crossed three mountain ranges, had led his horses over trails too rough to ride in the darkness or because the animals were too tired to carry him and he had covered the distance of 170 miles in exactly 24 hours.

Troops were at once put into motion to rescue Payne. Col. Wesley Merritt, with four troops of the Fifth cavalry reached Rawlings on the morning of October 2. Rankin immediately offered his services as guide and by noon Merritt's command was on its way. When they camped at midnight, they had covered 40 miles.

It was the morning of October 4, eighty miles away Payne and his comrades were holding off the Utes and praying for the arrival of help. He knew that his colonel would spare no effort to come to his rescue and he believed it just barely possible that Merritt would reach him by dawn of October 5.

It was a custom in the Fifth cavalry for one troop of the regiment to guide another into camp at night by sounding "officers' call." Surrounded by his wounded men, Payne lay in the trenches they had dug, listening eagerly as the first streaks of light appeared in the east. Suddenly the notes of a bugle were heard and "officers' call" floated out on the morning air.

In a few minutes the Utes were retreating sullenly before the steady advance of Merritt's dust-covered troopers. Rankin's ride of 170 miles over the roughest country in America and his faithful guiding of Merritt's men had saved Payne and his comrades.

Dogs Trained to Smuggle.

The Franco-Belgian frontier has long been a happy hunting ground of the smuggler, both amateur and professional. In the customs museum at Lille is a collection of exhibits which give a vivid idea of the tricks employed by smugglers.

There are chairs, benches, platforms, summer beds, walkers' mounting boards, shoulderstraps, saws and boots, all fashioned out for storing away tobacco. There are stacks of government papers concealed in a silk tobacco receptacle, hollow rockstick wherein to conceal cutter was smuggled, and workmen's drinking cans with only a few inches of liquor in a little vessel beneath the cork, the rest of the can being intended for tobacco.

There are numerous examples of spiked armor, spiked collars and harness furnished with a number of sharp spears, worn by the dogs trained to dash across from Belgium at night, and then protected against the customs dogs trained to chase them.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—"These twin babies have been under my care since birth. Not a day has passed without the use of Sykes Comfort Powder. They have a beautiful skin and have never had abomination of chafing, rashes, scalding, prickly heat from which so many babies suffer. I wish every mother could know about Sykes Comfort Powder."—Nettie C. Lewis, R. N., Grand Rapids, Mich.

The reason Sykes Comfort Powder is successful in such cases is because it contains six healing, antiseptic ingredients not found in ordinary talcums.

Anton Lang, the potter of Oberammergau, has been cast for the role of Christ in the greatest Passion Play, and has already made this role famous. The photograph shows Lang at work in his shop. Oberammergau has not staged its famous Passion Play since 1910 and is now preparing to give its next performance in 1922. The Passion Play was first produced in 1633, following the Thirty Years' War, and was an offering to the Lord in supplication for relief from the dread pestilence that had swept through Southern Bavaria in the wake of that great religious war. The Passion Play was then produced every ten years without a break, according to the vow of the people of Oberammergau. The great war interrupted its regular production for the first time in the play's history.

CANAL-LAKES ROUTE OPENED

Dwyer Brothers Two Cement Barges Of This City Make Trip Up The Hudson River Through The Barge Canal to Detroit via Lake Erie.

The Detroit News of August 24 says: The first cargo from the Atlantic seaboard to reach Detroit in canal-lake barge bottoms arrived August 23, proving, according to those who predicted the practicability of ocean barge transportation on the Great Lakes, that canal-lake type barges solve an important transportation problem economically.

The barges Charles O'Connor and Thomas F. Brennan arrived at Water Works Park with a cargo of 1,254 tons of Portland cement from Waterford, N. Y. They left Watertown July 27 in tow of a tug, and experienced delay enroute owing to the inexperience of the tug pilots with the barges and the difficulty of making headway over a new route.

The barges mentioned are owned by Dwyer Brothers of this city, and an account of the proposed trip through the barge canal and Lake Erie was given in The Freeman at the time the boats left here.

After giving a description of the barges, which are each 116 feet long, 29 feet wide with a depth of 13 feet, the Detroit News says: The barges and tug left Watertown and went through the New York barge canal to Tonawanda, thence to Oneida, where they entered the Great Lakes through the Niagara river. At Buffalo they were met by a Great Lakes tug that brought them to Detroit..

Captain Joseph Miller of Kingston, a veteran salt water sailor, was in command of both craft. He described the trip as a complete novelty to himself and crew, consisting of L. D. Gorham, Rome, mate; Tom Aikens, Kingston; and Edward A. Tromley, Hudson Falls, sailors.

Captain Miller in describing the trip said that "We had an uneventful trip through the canal. When we got into fresh water at the Niagara river we began to experience the feelings of sailors in a new world. Navigation was so different it did not seem like the same old United States We left roomy salt water for cramped fresh water. Boats rubbed their sides against us. It took close figuring to prevent accidents.

"But we got real thrill on Lake Erie the night of August 22. A hawser that lashed the Brennan to the O'Connor broke. I was on board the Brennan when she went adrift. A storm was lashing Lake Erie at the time. We rolled about in the darkness and I saw the lights of the tug and the O'Connor fade out. I had supreme confidence in the barges because I knew they had been built solidly enough to withstand the buffeting of waves in New York Sound, but nevertheless it was a thrilling night for Aikens and myself. We kept a sharp lookout for the tug, which we saw could not get a line to us in that storm.

"When daylight came we saw the smoke of the tug, which was coming towards us. We simply rolled about until she got a line to us. We didn't get far out of our course despite the severity of the storm. It proved that our barges were sufficiently strong to withstand the average lake tempest. We reached port here shipshape."

The Detroit News also carried a picture of Captain Miller and Mate Aikens and the two barges.

Bar Clambake Uneventful.

The annual clambake of the Ulster County Bar Association at Cuneo's Casino at Lake Katrine on Saturday afternoon attracted a large number of lawyers of this city and from around the county. The bake was served in excellent style and was thoroughly enjoyed by the lawyers and their guests. There were few athletic contests afterward because most of the lawyers were disinclined to exercise heartily after the sumptuous repast.

ELKS CLAMBAKE A GREAT EVENT

Notable Not Only For Appetites of The Elks But For The Truly Wonderful Showing In Athletic Events.

About 350 men, everyone with an appetite, enjoyed the annual clambake and the athletic events of the Kingston Protective Order of Elks, held Sunday at the Fording place along the Esopus creek. Tony Kohl, who is the steward of the Elks Club, was master of ceremonies and John M. Schussler was in charge of the bake proper, being an expert in that line, and all who had the good fortune to partake of the feast will attest to its excellence. During the day and before the serving of the bakes, there being two, one at 3 o'clock and one at 5 o'clock, Steward Kohl had the Elks Club chef on duty making clam cakes and clam fritters for the Elks. The menu of the bake included, besides clams to the limit, soft shell crabs, steamed chicken, bluefish, lobster, sweet and white potatoes, bantam yellow corn, sliced tomatoes, Schusslers' famous clam sauce, watermelon, cantaloupe, and ice cream. There was full and plenty for all and everything was cooked to a nicety.

The athletic program consisted first of a baseball game between Darby Doyle's Colts and Tony Kohl's Regulars. The game broke up in a row at the end of the eighth inning when the score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Regulars because of Capt. Kohl objecting to a decision by Cy. Conners the umpire. He then declared the game forfeited to the Colts by a score of 9 to 0. The Colts rung in Columbus Carroll as their pitcher he being a semi-professional box artist, while Tony Kohl did the twirling for the Regulars, Louie Sapp being his catcher. Big John Simmons was on the receiving end for the Colts.

In the fat man's race Billy Cohen was the winner of the silk umbrella although John Simmons was the favorite but he was handicapped because of eating too many clams. Harry Keyser was third in the race.

The lunch kit was awarded to Dr. Fowler of McBride's drug store he winning the 440-yard run. It required three heats Fowler winning the first and third and Tony Kohl the second heat. Kohl was the favorite and his backers lost heavily. Kohl was awarded a fine water color as the second prize.

Dan Murphy as the winner of the broad jump making 9 feet and 4 inches. He got a silk shirt which was the prize. Tony Miranti of Shokan was second and was awarded a silk scarf.

Big John Simmons of the iron workers gang on the Rondout creek bridge won the prize, a cap, in the endurance race in which there were fifty starters, he enduring for over an hour a walk about the grounds.

The tree climbing contest for a $10 bill was won by Abram Handler who climbed a tree to a height of about forty feet without slipping back once, although the tree was given a frequent shaking by men who had bet that he would fail and were hard losers.

The wrestling match prize, a pair of slippers, was given Philip Fitzpatrick who threw Big John Simmons side hold, two out of three times.

The Elks returned back to town about 7:30 p. m., in autos and spent the next four hours at the Elks' Club house, Fair street, talking about the great success of the 1921 clambake and outing of the day.

MANY BEADS USED

Embroidery Plays Large Part in Decorating Dresses.

Colors Used to Match Garment—Thin Black Frock Always Popular for Summer.

A survey of the shop windows, observes a writer in the Christian Science Monitor, reveals many new and interesting features of the afternoon dress, the most notable being, perhaps, the extensive use of bead embroidery, which plays a very large part in the decoration of the dresses of this season. Some of the dresses have the entire bodice bead embroidered, while a deep band also decorates the skirt reaching far up in uneven design and leaving only about one-third of the dress plain.

Others have bead motifs embroidered here and there on the dress. The beads used are often the same color as the dress, such as bronze beads for brown satin or crepe de chine, jet for black charmeuse or georgette, and steel or iridescent beads on gray

The thin black dress for summer weather is one of which we never seem to tire, for season after season it finds its way into the wardrobe of many women. Its mode of expression, however, varies considerably from year to year and this may be one reason for its perennial youth. Another, of course, is its suitability for many occasions and yet another, that a very large number of women recognize the fact that they really look their best in black. Jet embroidery is seen a good deal on the black afternoon dresses this year, sometimes being embroidered straight on the dress, or bands of bead trimming may be used.

One dress is composed of black crepe georgette with a long bodice, short sleeves and a skirt with four deep tucks. Two bands of bead trimming decorate the dress, passing over the shoulders, caught into loops at the waist, back and front, and hanging slightly below the skirt, disappear under the hem. The trimming is made up of jet and cut steel beads, its glistening effect making a pleasing contrast to the dull finish of the georgette.

The hat worn with this dress is of dull silver tissue, in color matching exactly the steel of the beads It is lined with black and over the silver tissue is draped black lace which is studded here and there with jet beads. Two silver roses hold the drapery in place. Another rather new and very smart black dress is made of crepe georgette and moire ribbon. The bodice is made of georgette, quite plain, with the neck and short sleeves bound with moire, while the skirt is composed entirely of bands of moire ribbon about four inches wide placed about two inches apart on the georgette. Cire ribbon could be used in the same way with equal success A dress like this could, of course, only be worn by some one tall and slender, but the same materials could be quite successfully arranged with the ribbon going down in stripes for those of larger dimensions instead of the barred effect.

The black taffeta frocks with their skirts encircled by formal little ribbon ruches are very picturesque, and it is quite unusual to see black taffeta unaccompanied by white organdie. Frills are edged with it, or it will appear at the neck and wrists in little plaited ruffles. Beautifully embroidered lingerie collars and cuffs are much worn with black taffeta, showing that there are still faithful adherents to the early Victorian mode.

IN CHIC RIBBON NOVELTIES

Ribbon novelties are commanding considerable attention in summer girls' outfits. This attractive Roman striped combination of hat and girdle, both of ribbon, are unusual, to say the least.

An Excellent Ironing Surface.

To make an ironing board on which it is a joy to iron, take one roll of cotton batting such as is used for comforts. Spread the cotton batting evenly over the board and fasten over this a cover made from unbleached muslin, tucking it down around the sides of the board. An extra length of muslin of unbleached muslin which can be easily washed should be used as an outer cover.

Something That Is Cheap.

The director of the American Museum of Natural History announces that mushroom beans are a drug on the market and prices are down to nearly nothing. If you have been delaying your purchase of mushroom beans, now is the time to lay in a supply.

GERMAN NOBLES NO LONGER STRUT

Sons of Kaiser Become Models of Self-Effacement.

HOHENZOLLERNS ARE THROUGH

Former Royal Family Eliminated Definitely From German Rule—Even if Country Returned to Monarchial Form of Government No Member of the Former Kaiser's Family Would Be Considered for Job of Ruler—Parade Days Are Gone.

Royal peacockery as it appears in Germany today is a first-class study in self-effacement. It must be remembered that they are all there—all those princes and dukes and counts and barons whose names before the war were sprinkled copiously over the journals of many capitals. In the old days they were received everywhere. Hostesses were glad to get them. They were distinguished, good talkers and made excellent dinner party material. Then, too, the names always looked well in the society columns. And now that no mention of them is seen, even in the fatherland, it is only natural to wonder what has become of them and how they are assimilating the principles of life under democratic rule.

One day early in 1920 I went with a friend into Pelzer's restaurant, in Neue Wilhelmstrasse, where one can have uncensored drinks at uncensored hours. Alongside me at the bar, Gordon Stiles writes in the New York Tribune, stood a tall, somewhat dyspeptic-looking individual, who obviously took a great interest in our English conversation. His general appearance was that of an Englishman. He had the trailing, horseshoe mustache of the Briton and the pink roundness which no amount of starvation can knock out of the German was missing.

Yet there were about him certain undeniable Teutonic characteristics. His speech was that of a German aristocrat and when at times he forsook the support of the bar his manner and carriage became purely Prussian.

I asked him to have a drink with me. And he took me up.

Is the Kaiser's Nephew.

"Do you know who dot feller iss?" asked the bartender, after my late companion disappeared.

"No," I said. "Who is he?"

"Dot iss Prinz Albert von Schleswig-Holstein. He's der nephew of der kaiser by marriage. He ain't got no money no more. He lose it all in der war."

"How does he live?"

"Oh, dose fellers always lifs. He got a onkel what's a duke—der Duke von Schleswig-Holstein. He's der brudder-in-law of der kaiser an' he got plenty money. He gif Prinz Albert some, I tink."

Ernst Gunther, duke of Schleswig-Holstein, and brother of the late kaiserin, is the son of Duke Frederick. Despite the loss of his northern estate, he is wealthy. He makes his home in his magnificent castle in Silesia and leaves it only on such occasions as business requires his presence in Berlin.

The duke is a man of medium height, stockily built and erect in carriage. His white hair and beard—aided somewhat by gold-rimmed eyeglasses on a chain—gave him a distinguished and substantial appearance. He uses his glasses mostly for gesturing purposes, through the medium of the right hand.

Well, as I remarked above, the duke was full of troubles when I first saw him. He felt that he was the victim of a rough deal in connection with his Schleswig-Holstein property. Under the plebiscite terms all property owned by the reigning family or by any person who might be in line for the throne was slated for confiscation. And the duke felt that not only was he being treated unfairly by the allied powers, but declared he had been tricked by the Danish government.

His contention was that his estate came in the category of private property owned by a private individual and inasmuch as it had been announced that such property would be respected, he protested vigorously against the pending confiscation.

In the old days the duke was wont to travel with a host of retainers and whole floors at the smartest hotels of many cities were engaged far in advance. Now he contents himself with one secretary and his goings and comings are as unostentatious as possible.

Kaiser's Sons Muzzled.

Strange as it may seem, less is seen and heard of the kaiser's three sons remaining in Germany than of other royalty. I think I discovered the explanation of this during a protracted effort to interview Eitel Friedrich. It was explained that, while the prince might not object to expressing his views on current affairs, he virtually had been ordered by the socialist government to keep his mouth shut. He had been told that as long as he did so he would be unmolested, but that if he started airing his opinions for publication he would be placed under surveillance at once and kept there.

As a matter of fact, I do not think Eitel's opinions would be worth much, anyway. A fat, flabby body is topped off by a red, flabby face, which has about the same amount of expression as a chestnut slab. As near as I can make out, his entire repertoire consists of eating, sleeping, drinking and attending church on Sunday.

Adalbert and Oscar also live in Potsdam, but are seldom seen outside a small circle of intimates. Sometimes one or the other of them slips into Berlin for a day, but he does it without the sounding of trumpets and without notifying the communist leaders of his intentions.

They are wise in avoiding the proletariat as much as possible, because the Hohenzollern family has been eliminated definitely from German rule. Even if the country adopted a monarchial form of government, the people's choice of a regent would not fall upon any member of the late reigning family. But it is safe to say that outside of Prussia, 85 per cent of the people wish nothing more to do with kings and emperors. The picture of the kaiser slipping over the Dutch frontier, leaving his army in the lurch and avoiding the subsequent sufferings which Germany has undergone while he lived in comfort, is still fresh in the mind of the ordinary German.

Upon the attitude of the masses ex-royalty turns a haughty and more or less amused eye. Adversity has not lost to princes and dukes the power of looking at their alleged inferiors in a manner cold, crushing and contemptuous. The look seems to say, "Poor fools! Can't you see that we are only biding our time?" They poke fun at the efforts of the socialists to govern the country and appear to feel that a system more to their liking is bound to come about in time.

A Pseudo-Democrat.

Prince Reuss has plenty of money, derived from large land holdings in south Germany, and most of his time since 1918 has been spent in the gayest resorts of Berlin. I constantly ran upon him in such places as the Palais de Danse, the Hotel Adlon and the exclusive haunts with which Kurfurstendamm is lined.

Generally he is accompanied by a bejeweled woman and drinks great quantities of champagne. But at that he always appears bored and aimless—as if depressed by the futility of life. In common with many ex-imperial officers, Reuss served for a time in the Noske guard, not because he sympathized with the government, but because he knew that the success of the radicals would puncture any monarchistic bubble which might be in the blowing. He was in command of the armored cars when the Bolsheviki were routed in Magdeburg and Braunschweig.

Just before Prince Reuss left the Noske guard he invited me to be his first guest at a new apartment which he had fitted up near Bayerischerplatz, and I went out for coffee one afternoon.

Suddenly he jumped to his feet. "Would you like to see my peace-time uniform?" he said. Almost before I had told him yes he was out of the room. Ten minutes later he rattled into my presence in a perfect blaze of glory. White tunic, trimmed with scarlet, shiny black riding boots, jingling spurs and jeweled sword. He was complete and the uniform was magnificent. Its wearer stamped up and down, looking like another man.

Parade Days Gone.

"Ah," he said. "Those were the days. And we did look smart on parade." He glanced again at the photograph gallery and his voice dropped and filled with emotion as he continued, "But it's gone; it's all gone. What are we now in this green stuff we wear? We look like a 3-ring circus!" He finished with a contemptuous smile.

Prince Reuss has a cousin, Prince Hohenlohe, who, after the downfall of the monarchy, developed into one of the weirdest characters in Berlin. In fact, so weird did he become that last year he took up his abode in a sanatorium where they keep folks under mild restraint, and he still is there, so far as I know.

Hohenlohe up to last summer was a familiar figure at Berlin's fancy gathering places. Once seen he is not forgotten. He is very tall, with no particular breadth, and wears elegant clothes.

Having on an occasion an opportunity to steer his highness up against the despised proletariat, I picked one of the low spots, a little restaurant dance hall, the proprietress of which was a little red-haired woman, whose name was Mary. She once kept a sailors' boarding house in the Argentine, and I think it unnecessary to say more.

In an aside to Mary I explained the rank of my companion and then introduced him. He stiffened up, clicked his heels together, and Mary curtsied so low that I thought she never would rise again. But she made it and later pulled herself together sufficiently to superintend the cooking of some of the best food to be had in Berlin. That was how the prince came to eat.

The wine was good and after awhile the prince asked Mary to dance. She returned from the floor breathless and flustered. "Ach," she said, "to think that little Mary has danced with a prince! Just to think of it!" As for the prince, it was such a treat to see him going through the rollicking and devastating German foxtrot and staring at his partner with the same look which he might have bestowed upon his executioner, come to lead him to the gallows.

There is a distinct difference between the attitude of German men toward ex-royalty and German women. The former appear to find a grim satisfaction in the downfall of their former superiors. The latter show evidences of a feeling of pity. The average girl is flattered by any attentions bestowed upon her by crashed royalty.

Changing Colors of Gems.

Experiments have proved that it is possible to change the color of certain precious and semi-precious stones by exposing them to the action of radium. A scientist put a number of sapphires of different kinds into a bag that contained a small quantity of radium. A month later the white sapphires had become yellow, the blue sapphires, green; the wine-colored sapphires, red, and the dark blue sapphires, violet.

SCIENTIST GETS DOPE ON LIZARDS

Dartmouth Professor Has Big Collection of Specimens.

AUTHORITY ON VERTEBRATES

Recognized Throughout the World as Leading Authority on Evolution of Vertebrates — His Investigations Throw Much Light on Some Ancient Structures and Functions of the Human Body—Gathers Specimens in Out-of-the-Way Places.

There is a sting in the air that sweeps down from the north over the plains of Hanover and lounging lizards lurk and leer in the light and learning of Dartmouth's academic groves. How and why one of the Dartmouth faculty brought more lizards to Hanover and got more sting from the south into his otherwise peaceful study than either he or his wife intended has been told by Prof. William Patten, professor of biology at Dartmouth.

He has worked many years on the evolution of vertebrates and is recognized throughout the biological world as the leading authority on this subject. His work on fossils, fishes and the embryology of various living animals has enabled him to reconstruct in a wholly new way the genealogical tree of the animal kingdom and to trace the evolution of man down to the lowest kind of animals.

Throws Light on Many Things.

This revolutionary work is sure to yield important results for it throws much needed light on some very ancient structures and functions of the human body that have been very puzzling to medical men. Professor Patten reconstructed a little known group of fossils called ostracoderms and he discovered that this class formed a new class of animals connecting the lowest fish-like vertebrates with the invertebrates.

Professor Patten also showed that the ostracoderms were near relatives of the giant sea scorpions, which were the kingpins of the animal world 50,000,000 years ago, more or less.

These two great classes proved to be the real missing links in evolution for they filled in by far what was the widest gap in man's ancestral history. The nearest living survivors of these very ancient animals are the little land scorpions, found everywhere in the tropics, and limulus, the familiar horseshoe crab of our Atlantic sea shores.

For this reason the limulus have long been a favorite study with Professor Patten, for it now gives us the best picture of high life as it was many millions of years ago. These facts have been fully and clearly set forth in his new book on "The Evolution of the Vertebrates and Their Kin."

This long and careful study of the larger factors in evolution forms his new book on "The Grand Strategy of Evolution," which is classed by leading biologists throughout the country as one of the most significant and original contributions to biology that has appeared for years.

For these reasons Professor Patten, accompanied by Mrs. Patten, has made numerous trips to out-of-the-way places in the world in order to collect scorpions' eggs and other unusual things to assist him in his study.

On his recent trip to Costa Rica he obtained all the scorpions he needed for his work.

Collected Plenty of Scorpions.

A few pennies were sufficient to induce native women, men and children to capture these much dreaded animals and to bring them alive to his improvised laboratory, where the eggs in all stages of development were removed, treated with special chemicals and preserved for further study.

Many other things of interest to biologists were obtained, such as birds, butterflies, reptiles and Indian pottery. Living in the treetops of the Central American jungle is a peculiar species of large lizard called iguana, possibly the prototype of the fabled basilisk and cockatrice. They have a curious little eye in the middle of the head like that of the scorpions. A rudiment of such an eye is still present in man, but concealed in the brain.

These extraordinary creatures form a favorite food for the natives. Professor Patten shot four of them just before leaving Costa Rica and brought them to Hanover on ice. He also brought back to Hanover some live scorpions and kept them for a while in a little glass dish on his study table until one day most of them unfortunately escaped. At last accounts they were still running about among the professor's books anxiously pursued by the professor's wife, armed with a pair of forceps.

But the professor assures his friends that while the sting of a scorpion may be painful for a short time and always somewhat discomforting, it is not fatal. Mrs. Patten was also greatly relieved to learn that they will not live long or multiply rapidly. Dartmouth undergraduates don't mind a few "lizards" on the campus.

Heart Beats After Breathing Stopped.

Doctors in London, England, gave Leo Major an anesthetic. He stopped breathing, but his heart kept on beating. A pulmotor failed to restore his breath. After seven and one-half hours, heart action also ceased.

Equals Twenty Tunnels.

The two enormous masonry-faced steel towers supporting the contemplated bridge connecting Manhattan with Jersey City will each of them be 840 feet high, or 48 feet taller than the Woolworth building.

The upper deck of the bridge, over which will flow all the automobile and motortruck traffic, will accommodate as many moving vehicles as ten two-track tubes such as the pair soon to be built under the Hudson river at Canal street, at a cost of $150,000,000.

The lower deck will carry ten railroad tracks.

The bridge is expected to cost $110,000,000. Tunnels under the river, equivalent to the bridge in traffic capacity, would, it is estimated, cost two and a half times as much. Not fewer than 20 of them would be required.

Artificial Limbs of Metal.

At St. Thomas' hospital, London, Dr. Edred M. Corner, one of the most famous surgeons in England, has been conducting experiments with light metal artificial limbs on soldiers who had lost limbs during the war and whose recovery had been slow. These show that about 90 per cent of thigh amputations can advantageously be fitted with light artificial limbs, with which the men are able to walk with less fatigue and more satisfaction.

FAMILY.

Memoriam.

In sacred memory of my beloved wife, Frances, who entered into life everlasting one month ago.

One long month ago today
My dear wife went away to stay,
We were so happy, how could I know
My joy so soon must turn to woe.
But the Heavenly Father called her
And we said "Thy will be done,"
For I knew that He alone could heal
And keep my darling one.
CHARLES E. BISHOP, Husband.

In loving memory of our dearly beloved daughter and sister, Mae E. Hein, who entered eternal life August 29, 1920.

After suffering and pain
She is now at rest:
Though we loved her so dearly
Our Saviour knew best.
For weeks she prayed
For the Lord to decide,
And then God called her
With Him to abide.

STREET RACERS FINED $10 EACH

Philip Rucker And Abraham Singer Were Caught Racing Automobiles On Strand—Other Cases In Police Court.

Philip Tucker and Abraham Singer, two chauffeurs, were caught racing their automobiles through the Strand in Ponckhockie several days ago by Officer Hess, and were placed under arrest. The hearing was adjourned until this morning when both pleaded guilty, and were fined $10 each. Since the summer season opened at Kingston Point Park there has been considerable reckless driving through the Strand to the park, but fortunately so far no one has been killed or injured. The auto drivers appear to have absolutely no regard for the rights of pedestrians and drive their cars at from 25 to 40 or more miles an hour.

Harry Krom of Rifton was fined $3 this morning for driving on the left side of a police standard at the Strand and Hasbrouck avenue. He was arrested Sunday by Officer Robert Healey.

Joseph Huber of Saugerties, who parked his car on John street in the restricted area was arrested Saturday night was discharged today with a reprimand.

George Foster, a stranger, was arrested on a charge of trespassing on railroad property by Detective Goodsell of the West Shore railroad. He was given twenty minutes to leave town.

Smoking Is American Habit.

Many efforts have been made to show that the use of tobacco was known to the ancient Greeks and Egyptians, but they never have been successful. The belief is generally accepted that the American aborigines were the first to make use of the weed and that Columbus was the first man to chonicle its use.

SMITH FINDS ANOTHER PLOT

This One is a Complicated System by "Food Trust" to Destroy New York City Market Department.

Raymond Smith, formerly of Kingston, who has had wide experience in investigating various public officials, is deputy commissioner of markets under Commssioier Edwin J. O'Malley of New York city, whose department has been under fire for several weeks in connection with graft disclosures before the Meyer legislative committee which in investigating the Hylan administration.

Mr. Smith charges that the committee's attack on the markets department is the result of an effort of a so-called food trust to destroy the department.

In answer to Smith's charge, members of the Meyer committee on Sunday pointed out as strange that although O'Malley and Smith say they have known this for three years, they have waited until this moment to rush the facts before the public.

One member of the committee is quoted by the Tribune as saying:

"And you must remember, too, that Smith is now a deputy commissioner of markets, and that what he said was nothing more than a mere glittering generality, not mentioning the name of one stand holder in any market whom he would be willing to tie up with any packer.

Besides, Smith says that the stands in a great number of cases were obtained for these merchants by agents of the packers. From whom did these agents get these stalls, and how did they get them for these merchants? O'Malley has said that he himself is solely responsible for the issuance of all market permits. Maybe when he takes the witness stand he will be able to throw some light on these questions, if what Smith says is true."

According to the Tribune, Smith told Commissioner of Accounts Horschfield, who is also conducting an investigation, that he had been a former examiner for the United Federal Trade Commission and an agent for the American Livestock Association. Despatches from Chicago Sunday quoted Vice-President O'Donnell and Secretary T. W. Tomlinson of the association as saying that they did not know of any Raymond Smith. They said that he certainly was not authorized to speak for the association.

Disclosure before the Meyer committee last week included testimony regarding the withdrawal of $3,000 from a bank by one of the stand holders in one of the markets just before visiting the office of Commissioner O'Malley and subsequent erasures on his check book and account books after he had been served with a subpoena to appear before the committee.

While in Kingston Smith was secretary to Judge Hasbrouck. After leaving Kingston he was employed as investigator at Albany and since then has been mentioned in connection with facts unearthed from files of private correspondence of public officials. About a year ago he visited Kingston and announced that he was traveling for Boston manufacturers of jam.

Plan Shrines to Burroughs.

The John Burroughs Memorial association has started its campaign to raise funds to purchase and maintain the various properties of the late naturalist. It is estimated it will take about $36,000 to purchase them, and an additional $4,000 to maintain them the first year.

The association intends to maintain the Burroughs properties as the naturalist himself maintained them. His working library, some of his original manuscripts, rifles, shotguns and fishing tackle will be exhibited. It is the opinion of the association that shrines to great men, especially shrines to literary men, are too few, and that the many friends and admirers of John Burroughs will be interested in keeping up the places in which he lived, studied and labored in the 84 years of his life. It hopes to raise funds to maintain these properties by popular subscription.—New York Times.

Waterproof Matches.

Campers and picnickers will hail with delight the new waterproof match, which can be easily made at home in the following way: Melt a few lumps of candle wax in an old can on the stove. Allow this to cool a little and then, before it has set, dip the matches in, one at a time. Treat the heads and about half of the wooden part. Place the matches on one side to cool. Matches treated in this simple manner have been soaked in water for many hours, and they have ignited as readily as those which were perfectly dry. The only difference is that, in striking, it is needful to do so a trifle more firmly so as to get through the thin film of wax surrounding the head. When once the flame starts, the match burns very readily, owing to the wax which has adhered to the wood. Any ordinary matches can be treated in the manner described.

Ants Make Biscuits.

According to recent studies of the common Mediterranean ant, the seeds which are collected are kept for a time dry and are eventually put out in the rain so that they begin to germinate. This has the advantage of bursting the hard seed-coats, and in some cases of starting processes of fermentation. At a certain stage, however, the ants kill the embryo plant by biting off the radicle or other parts and the seeds are dried again in the sun. According to Neger the dried seeds of some leguminous plants, for instance, are then taken back into the nest and chewed into dough. This is dried once again in the sun in the form of biscuits, which are eventually put into the cupboard.

LAST GOSPEL MEETING BEST

The series of gospel services conducted in the open air by the Young Men's Christian Association during the months of July and August have met with good sucess. Much credit is due to the co-operation of the pastors of the various churches and to the volunteer workers who assisted in so many different ways.

The service conducted Sunday evening was the best attended of any and with the song service in charge of Charles H. Knight everything went well. Mr. Knight mentioned that it was forty years ago when Moody and Sankey were in Kingston and that some of the choir that he drilled at that time were present in the audience.

The enthusiasm and earnestness that he still shows proves that he has lost none of his old time qualities as a gospel leader. He was assisted by Richard Dawe who sang two solos which were greatly appreciated by all present.

The speaker of the evening was the Rev. A. A. Zabriskie, retired. His voice was clear and the audence had no difficulty in hearing him. Mr. Zabriskie is a forceful speaker and and he brought a message of cheer and comfort to all. He described very clearly how man was saved through the power of Jesus Christ and emphasized that these were the days when we need to give more heed to the things of the Kingdom of God.

As far as known now it will be the plan to conduct these meetings next summer. During the winter months the religious work committee of the Association are planning on conducting Bible classes and services of different kind.

KINGSTON, N Y AUG 29, 1921

LENINE'S CONFESSION

In the earlier part of 1918 a Swiss student of German blood attending college in this country could not be convinced that the German army was losing ground and later absolutely refused to credit the news that Germany was being beaten He contended that the German army was the most perfect in the world and therefore invincible, that the American newspapers did not tell the truth and that when the real facts became known to us there would be a "great shock" He stubbornly kept this up until the armistice was signed and the preliminaries of the Versailles treaty were under discussion, after which he fell silent, evidently troubled for the first time with any sort of misgivings

Doubtless there is a similar attitude among the American friends of the Bolshevist revolution in Russia toward the "confession" of Lenine announced by the Paris Matin, for these have steadfastly asserted that the "capitalist-controlled" American press was persistently and outrageously lying about the situation in Russia. Nevertheless the alleged confession of Lenine may be regarded as a logical culmination of much that has been reported before and it is of a character to cause painful misgivings among our parlor Bolshevists. According to the Matin, it has come into possession of a letter written by Lenine to an old friend in which he says that the revolution has failed, that the communist State which he tried to establish was a dream and a chimera, that he made miscalculations and mistakes in his "estimate of class consciousness," that "the Russian workers and peasants have betrayed their own interests," that he still rules only because of "the efforts of the party which is giving all its energy to keep the power in our hands," that even the party is 'breaking up" because of petty jealousies and personal interests, that all he asks now is time to find out where his "theories were wrong and to construct new ones," and further

As for me I am tired. The inefficiency of the people around me and the bourgeois tendencies which gnaw more and more at the organism of the party are wearing me down. Governmental work is impossible in the way it is carried on here. Our young bureaucrats have completely inherited the errors of their predecessors and have even widened the gulf between the governors and the governed Our gamble on the collective instinct which ought to hold together the members of the party was a mistake. The collective instinct of the peasants and the workers has never justified the hopes we placed in it and has completely failed.

All this was foreshadowed long since and will cause no surprise among non-partisan observers, but it will take some time for the American friends of the Russian revolution to face the inevitable. Like the Swiss student referred to above, they may be expected to hope on and trust on. As he waited for the treaty of Versailles before he permitted his faith in the German army to be shaken, so they are likely to wait for the exile of Lenine and the possible restoration of the imperial family before they can begin to recover from their illusions.

The dangerous practice indulged in by many automobilists of driving through the country at night with only one headlight burning has resulted in many minor accidents and will eventually result in a serious accident. The practice is a violation of the highway law and one which should be stopped before some serious accident results. Any night dozens of cars may be seen on the highways with one or the other of their lights extinguished The safeguarding of the highways by State Police would seem to be of more importance than the seizure of vinegar.

With a Republican Congress and a Republican Executive striving to outdo each other in making a record for retrenchment and economy, the poor taxpayer stands a pretty good show to be the beneficiary. During the eight years of Democratic rule there was no competition to see who could reduce expenses most.

The investigation into the New York city government under the Tammany administration is uncovering a story of extravagance and official incompetence very much like the record of the regime at Washington from which the country was relieved on March 4th

The Secretary of Labor estimates the number of persons out of employment in this country at 5,735,000, which approximates the highest record of the past Under the circumstances labor's continuing stand for war-time wages is a remarkable phenomenon

3 Do animals migrate like birds?

Answers To Previous Questions.

1 What is the name of the little black-green bird whose song is similar to the yellow warbler's, and which is slightly larger?

Impossible to reply accurately with so little data Question comes from the west, where warblers are found in almost forty varieties It might be the black-poll warbler Dendroica streata Forst, between 4 and 6 inches in lengh

2 How many young are there in a skunk litter?

Usually from six to ten, which are born in summer The skunk is counted the most prolific of the Mustelidae, or fetidscent group The young remain with the parents through the winter following their birth. If taken very small, they can be tamed as pets, but are risky unless carefully managed

3 Why are two rainbows often seen at the same time?

When you see two rainbows, you will notice the colors of the second are in reverse order from that of the first The first bow is due to the rays of the sun falling upon the outer portions of the drops and suffering two refractions and one reflection before reaching the eye The second bow is due to the rays falling on the inner side of the drops and suffering two refractions and two reflections

DIDN'T SEE THE "MOB."

Trained Observer Failed to Find Disturbance at the Fair.

The statement furnished to The Freeman by the Rev Dr Rennetts C Miller, representing the New York Civic League, describing what he purports to have taken place along the midway at the Ellenville fair on Thursday afternoon was read with amazement by The Freeman reporter who was in attendance there that afternoon During the afternoon the reporter spent practically the entire time along the midway, where most of those who attended the fair were to be found, and where he met more acquaintances from various parts of the county than any other place on the fair grounds

If the Rev Dr Miller is correct in his statement that "The closed concessionaires were angry and threatening, some of them cursed the reformer other surrounded him till quite a mob kept him busy answering questions and facing disagreeable threats and insults,' it was not apparent to the reporter, who had heard of the presence of the agent of the league and was on the lookout for any possible disturbance

The choicest bit of the reverend agent's statement is that "after nearly an hour with the mob he escaped without any serious injury"

It may be that the agent thought that the crowds which continually were passing along the midway composed a "mob" which was seeking to do him "serious injury," but to the reporter of The Freeman who has attended the Ellenville fair many years the charge seems to be absolutely without foundation.

The thousands who attended the Ellenville fair on Thursday compose the class to which the men who earn their living by employment as agents of the Civic League and similar organizations appeal for funds at stated intervals. They will know how much credence to give statements issued by such organizations.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Jim was ready to start on his search for a new job when a tap at his door halted him. Miss Billings, his erstwhile employer, peeked in.

"I hate to see you going James. A man is needed so badly around the place There are pipes leaking, the drains need cleaning, and—"

"You need a plumber'"

"The only one in town refuses to come because I haven't paid last winter's bill Fifty-five dollars for thawing out pipes' I'll never pay it, and yet, there are many things that need attention"

"I dont know anything about plumbing." Jim remarked "Once I did some soldering, and—"

"You'll do, James I'll run down and shut off the water at once. There's a faucet in the bathroom that drips continually."

Jim lost the rest of her words for she was hurrying down the stairs to the cellar He laid his coat and hat on the dresser and donned his overalls "After all, it's a job, and that's what I need"

Miss Billings kept at his heels all day and watched him work A new washer in the faucet stopped the leak A piece of copper soldered onto the boiler put a stop to the stream of water that trickled continually to the floor By noon of the second day, Jim thought he had completed all his tasks when he recalled Miss Billings's mention of the set-tubs in the cellar that would not drain

He descended the stairs and tapped the pipes Already the tubs were over half full of water, and a prodding with wire did not relieve the situation. Jim tinkered around, testing, turning bolts, not knowing just how to go to work. Suddenly a cap which he had been tampering with burst off, and a gush of water shot forth. Jim tried to fit the cap into the pipe but the force of the water behind was too great. He looked feverishly around for the shut-off, but Miss Billings had always attended to that and he could not find it in the dark cellar.

Still the water poured forth, spreading over the floor and soaking Jim "I've got to stop this somehow," he groaned, "but how?"

"Shut off the water, Mr. Smarty!" Elsie stood on the stairs, laughing at his plight.

He glanced at the little maid who had been so disgruntled because of his lack of attention toward her. "Where is the shut-off?"

"Don't you know?"

"Would I be standing here with Niagara Falls pouring over me if I did?"

Elsie laughed again "I'll bargain with you There's a dance going on in the village tonight If you'll take me I'll shut off the water. If you won't—"

"Well?"

"Miss Billings has gone to leave tea with the parson's wife I am going for a walk You may spend your time watching the water rise"

"Elsie, you are a-a-"

"Do we go to the dance Jim?"

The water was stopping oddly against Jim's chin He thought of Miss Billings's despair should she return to see the flooded cellar, and he succumbed "How many dances, Miss?" disheartedly

"As many as you care to give me"

"Make it one hundred per cent. I'll go the limit Now turn off the—do, wait a jiffy"" Jim saw to the further corner, a sudden intuition coming to him He found the shut-off. "I guess that dance is all off."

Elsie said nothing but disappointment was written all over her face as she turned away

"Do it Jim," Jim called to her. "We'll go if you was the worst"

"Do I? Oh, Jim!"

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

By ALFRED STEPHEN BRYAN

One Scotching The Snobbish In Golf—White Felt Hats—The Knitted Slip-On Jacket And Plaid Knickers—Ties Without End And With All Sorts Of Ends—Kit Bags For Trippers

New York, August 27

THERE was, and not so long ago, when Golf was dismissed by many of us with the ready sneer that it was the rich man's game or the old man's game. It is the rich man's game only in the sense that it yields rich rewards in health and relaxation. It is the old man's game in the sense that you must be well past middle life before you've begun to master the complexities of loggy, bogy and bunker. King James VI. of Scotland, the birthplace of golf, never swung his niblick on Hoddington with keener zest than clubs are swung today throughout the American. Though the get-up for golf began quite elaborately, it has ended quite simply. Yet, you cannot ignore the game from its country. Scotch it was, is and always will be. Without knickers, cap and brogues it would be like Red Riding Hood without the Wolf. There have been important changes in the golf turnout, due to the fact that some of the earlier garments proved too heavy and bulky for our climate. Elastic knitted jackets have, in many instances, replaced Norfolk jackets. Knickers have become wider and golf stockings have become lighter. Many "crank" professionals have gone in for "blazer" jackets because of their grateful thinness. Thick-soled shoes have been discarded as overly clumsy. Dress for the game has almost come down to the proverbial irreducible minimum in weight and weave.

Cooling The Fevered Brow

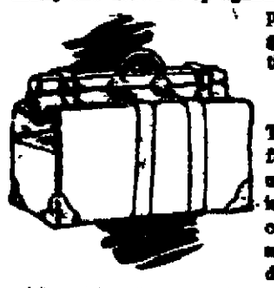
Among the newest hats for golf or tennis are those of light white felt, one of which is portrayed in the top sketch. It is finished in the familiar Alpine shape and may be worn with brim turned up or flipped down. The crown has three air vents on each side to cool the fevered brow on a blistering day. The hat-ribbon and cravat are striped in the same colors. Similar hats are made of white flannel, duck or canvas, either in the round-crown or helmet shape.

No Sleeves—No Strain

One of the really smart golf get-ups of the season is illustrated above. The player wears no coat, but, instead, a 6-button, sleeveless knitted jacket having a waist-seam and squarish flaps over the side pockets. The lapels, provided with buttons, may be turned up to protect one against wind or rain. This jacket, you will notice, is slightly curved to waist. The full-sprung knickers reveal the new plaid pattern effect, which is gaining in vogue. The cap has a flexible, pleated crown and a long visor, also new and vogueish touches.

Ties—Rings From 'Varsity Towns

New-knot ties of fashionable cut are procurable in a broad range of shapes—wide or narrow; square, round, pointed or flushed off end. The tie, reproduced in preceding paragraph, is the wide affair especially made to fit a particular type of turn-down collar, that with a generous front opening and rounded corners. One knots this tie firmly and draws it up against the top of the collar band, now the practice among collegians and the legions who would follow them even to the extremes of folly.



"Your Old Kit Bag"

Travel has customs, but no fashions, for the paramount thought must be utility. Though the plebeian suit case is carried less than it used to be, it cannot be outdone for light, practical service. The leather kit bag shown, double-handled and double-strapped with reinforced corners, is a smart and roomy piece of luggage, if you undertake quite a bit of a trip.

Last-Minute Modes Of The Week

Soft hats and derbies for Autumn follow the lead of Springtime in their low crowns and snug brims as worn in London and New York.

Morning waistcoats of brown or gray corduroy cloth will soon be seen pairing off with sanpe jackets.

Upon many soft hats the bow on the ribbon is set just back of the centre, instead of directly in the middle.

LITTLE GIRL MAKES RECORD AS GRADUATE

Betty Jane Hamilton, at the Age of Twelve, Gets Out of High School With Honors.

Graduating from the New Castle high school at the age of twelve years was the record-shattering precedent that was established in western Pennsylvania by Miss Betty Jane Hamilton of New Castle, Pa.

Miss Betty completed the entire grade school course and the four-year high school course and landed in the honor class, among the graduates, when commencement night arrived.

This is probably a record that will stand for many years in this city, and perhaps in the nation, for that matter. For the past two years students have stepped out of the New Castle high school at the age of fourteen years, but the record for graduating at twelve far eclipses the mark set by the fourteen-year-olders.

Last year the student who was graduated from the New Castle high school at the age of fourteen years, passed the entrance examinations and entered Harvard university last fall. He was Herbert Hoffelt.

Two years ago the local student who achieved a diploma at the age of fourteen was Edmond Hamilton, a brother of Betty Jane. He at that time held the record, but his younger sister has far outdistanced him. He entered Westminster college and is making good as a collegiate student. His sister also expects to enter the same institution and will add to her laurels by enrolling in college classes of a first rate institution at the age of thirteen. Her birthday is in July.

Miss Betty Jane is no lop-sided student either, as in addition to going through the high school classes in record time she studied music consistently as a side issue and is interested in other girl activities of her neighborhood.

All in all, the last three years has developed a remarkable trio of students in New Castle. Perhaps no school in the nation can lay claim to any such record.

He gives all his credit to his wife, whom Great Britain decorated and presented with a $25,000 bonus.

WEDDED ISOLATED GIRL.

Pane of Glass Shielded Bridegroom and Priest From Fever Germs.

Miss Kate O'Brien of Philadelphia and Charles Barker of Vancouver, B. C., were married in Moosejaw the other day by Rev. Father O'Brien of Boston, through a sheet of glass which prevented the scarlet fever, which the bride had contracted, reaching the bridegroom and priest.

Miss O'Brien left Philadelphia about a week ago to be married in this city, but contracted fever en route and had to leave the train at Moosejaw. Barker left for that town at once on learning of the trouble and insisted that there be no postponement of the wedding.

The girl was moved to a room and a speaking tube inserted in the wall for the priest, who received the assents of the bride by nods of the head.

SOLDIERS SALUTE KINGSTON HOSTS

The Freeman has been requested to publish the following:

We the disabled soldiers who have been enjoying in full your hospitality and are about to leave your city, wish to make known to the people of Kingston the value we have derived from our stay. We all agree that our stay has worked wonders, physically. We also feel a very keen appreciation of the friendly, patriotic spirit in which we were welcomed and entertained.

To those Kingstonians who arranged dinners, dances, entertainments, picnics and rides, and other forms of pleasure too numerous to mention individually, we offer our wholehearted thanks. Mere words, however, seem inadequate as a means of expressing our appreciation of Mrs. A. Knauth's public spirited sacrifice of her home for our comfort; also Dr. E. A. Dederer's and Mrs. T. Bridges's tender and sympathetic care of us while here.

Kingston, we salute you.

Fielder of New York city, and neither he or his wife and two children were injured, but several of the Cuban tourists in the Studebaker were cut and bruised and one woman sustained a compound fracture of one leg.

Turn and Turn About.

Prof. Nicholas Roerich, the Russian painter who refused the post of minister of fine arts in the Lenin government and who is now in the United States, tells an amusing story of the initiation of the soviet system in the imperial opera. The entire staff of the opera house in Moscow, directors, scene painters, singers, were instructed that thereafter all were to be treated on an equal basis, no one being considered better than another, and all to receive the same wage. It may be imagined that the temperamental stars did not receive this without emotion. On the night of the next performance the tenor in the leading role could not be found and a frantic search was made while the audience waited. Finally he was discovered by an amazed manager selling programs in the lobby.

"What madness, is this?" shouted the manager. "Don't you know we are holding the curtain for you?"

"Ah," answered the singer with ironic sweetness, "you see we are all equal now. Tonight I sell the programs. Let one of the ushers sing my role."

Crack Poughkeepsie Team Fails to Stop Colonials' Steam Roller—Culloton's Hurling in the Pinches Turned Them Back.

Colonials, 5; Poughkeepsie Regulars, 2.

These figures tell the story of Saturday's game, the most exciting contest staged at the Athletic Field this year. It was the first meeting of the season beween the two teams, and incidentally the Colonials' first game in the Hudson Valley Semi-Pro League. The Poughkeepsie Club came to Kingston determined to put an end to the Colonials' winning streak, but found themselves up against a better team.

In "Bud" Culloton, mighty hurler of the local club, the Bridge City representatives ran up against a stone wall. Time and time again a Poughkeepsie batter faced Culloton but in every instance except one when a hit would have scored a run, "Bud" was master of the situation. And then it was a little infield tap—a hit that Rice fielded cleanly but could not get across to first in time—that gave the Reguiars a chance to score. Eleven strike outs and ten men left on bases is proof of "Bud's" effectivenes in the pinches.

Deegan was another player whose work stood out brilliantly. Matty was all over the field, gobbling up hot grounders and short flies with equal ease. Rice had nothing to do in the field, but his two hits came at opportune moments and drove two runs across the plate.

When Umpire Jordan called "Play Ball" at 3:40 p. m., the largest crowd of the season was on hand. The playing field was entirely surrounded by fans, and ground rules were made necessary. A hit into the crowd in either right or left field, or on over throw to first or third, went for two bases.

Dewey, the first Poughkeepsie man to face Culloton, could not solve "Bud's" twisters and struck out. Luck was with Stanley, however, and he beat out an infield tap. Norton also was dazzled by Culloton's speed and followed Dewey to the bench. Ed. Phelan, clean-up man and slugger extraordinary of Whetmore's crew, now approached the plate. "Bud" whizzed them over so fast for Ed. that the big first baseman did not even get a foul tip, making the third strike out of the inning, while the crowd gave vent to its approval.

It was a different thing in the Kingston half of the first, and Elmer Beecher, the lanky spitballer who worked for the visitors, got a taste of what was in store for him. Fitzgerald greeted Beecher with a Texas Leaguer over second. A hit and run play went wrong, however, and Leo was thrown out trying to make second. Moore got a hit when his grounder took a high bound over Beecher's head, and Dewey was given an error when he threw wild to first on the play, Moore going to second. Jack Robins got back into his batting stride with a hit to left, Moore going to third. Deegan then raised a high fly which Stanley captured, and Moore was doubled up when he tried to make home after the catch.

Only three men faced Culloton in the Poughkeepsie half of the second, but what an inning it proved for the Colonials! Connors went out on strikes, but Beecher couldn't find the plate for Schirick and the Kingston captain went to first. Schwab followed with a hit to right, and Schirick went to second. Artie Rice slammed out a single, scoring Schirick, the crowd going wild with joy. Culloton kept up the fusillade by driving a hot single over second, sending Schwab over the plate.

By this time the bewildered Poughkeepsie players decided to hold a conference among themselves, at the same time giving Beecher a breathing spell. When they decided to resume play Fitzgerald gave them something else to think about by lacing out a two-bagger, sending Rice and Culloton home with runs three and four. Moore and Robins went out, ending the inning.

Beecher got a single in the Regulars' half of the third, but was forced by Dewey.

Freddie Dahn, former captain of the Bonackers and now left fielder of the Poughkeepsie team, robbed Cy Connors of a hit by a wonderful one-hand catch in the Kingston end of the third. The big crowd cheered Dahn to the echo, and he was forced to doff his cap many times in response to the generous applause.

Both sides went along without any more scoring until the sixth, when Kingston added another run. With one down Schirick poled out a two bagger. Schwab went out, but Rice duplicated Schirick's hit and drove the captain over the rubber.

Culloton's exhibition of pitching in the seventh inning was as fine a performance as has been seen on the local diamond in many a season. Carpenter, first up, led off with a single. Sheldon followed with another, Carpenter going to second. Beecher, who had hit safely in both of his previous attempts, was now up. "Bud" put every ounce of steam he possessed behind the ball, and Beecher went out on strikes. Dewey, lead-off man, followed. He, too, fell a victim to the Fordhamite's cunning, and took three vain swings at the ball. Stanley caught hold of a fast one and sent it to center field for a single, and fast fielding by Fitzgerald held Carpenter on third. Three men on and two out. Norton at bat. He raised a high fly which Deegan caught, and the crowd breathed easy again.

The Poughkeepsie rooters—and there were plenty of them on the field—got their only chance to cheer in the eighth. Two were down when Esterly scratched a little infield hit. Carpenter followed with a single. Two men on and two out—the situation of the seventh repeated. But this time Sheldon hit a terrific drive between Schwab and Fitzgerald for three bases, sending Esterly and Carpenter over the plate. Sheldon was stranded on third when Beecher went out, and the scoring for the day was over.

George Gibson sent Young Johnny Morrison against the Brooklyn Dodgers and succeeded in breaking Pittsburgh's losing streak. Three hits was all Uncle Robby's boys could garner off the youthful Pirate hurler.

15,000 fans saw the two National League games in New York Sunday.

John Collins's timely single in the 11th inning gave the Red Sox a game at Chicago.

Young King Cole shoveled the Yankees into the discard Sunday and they lost ground to Cleveland. Ruth got three two baggers.

Joe Woods batted in two of the Cleveland's runs with a double and scored the third and winning tally with a homer against Washington.

The Browns jumped all over Hasty, the A's young hurler, and hammered out a one-sided victory.

CLOSE INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE FINISH

This is the final week in the Industrial baseball schedule and two of the games, notably the U. & D. vs. Silk Mills and Lace Mills vs. Peter Schuyler, are being followed with keen interest as the outcome of these games decide the places of honor in the league. A tie and perhaps a double tie may develop. If the U. & D. win from the Silk Mills on Tuesday evening, the two teams are tied for first place. Correspondingly if Peter Schuyler wins from Lace Mills on Friday, a tie will result for third place. The U. & D. game on Tuesday, of course, holds first interest. Joe Long's crack aggregation have a hard fight and much depends on the battery. As yet it has not been learned whom he will put on the mound. The regular Silk Mill line-up will be in order, with Hoffman and Roosa as battery. Following is the week's schedule of games:

Aug. 29—Willite vs. Silk Mills.
Aug. 30—U. & D. vs. Eilk Mills.
Sept. 2—Willite vs. Grocers.
Sept. 2—Lace Mills vs. Peter Schuyler, Hasbrouck Park.

Staatsburg Defeated at Rhinebeck.

The Staatsburg baseball team met a defeat for the second time this year at Rhinebeck Sunday afternoon by the score of 2 to 1. Although the Rhinebeck team scored in the first inning the Staatsburgs could not score until the ninth. Staatsburg at one time had three men on bases but the nevt three players struck out. There was a large crowd of rooters for both sides and the game was very interesting all through the nine innings. The Staatsburgs defeated the Rhinebeck team on their home grounds three weeks ago, and now the games stand 1 and 1. The third game will probably be played at Rhinebeck during the Dutchess county fair. Kid Taylor of Kingston was in the box for the Staatsburgs.

Oberammergau has not staged its famous Passion Play since 1910 and is now preparing to give its next performance in 1922. The Passion Play was first produced in 1633, following the Thirty Years' War, and was an offering to the Lord in supplication for relief from the dread pestilence that had swept through Southern Bavaria in the wake of that great religious war. The Passion Play was then produced every ten years without a break, according to the vow of the people of Oberammergau. The great war interrupted its regular production for the first time in the play's history.

CANAL-LAKES ROUTE OPENED

Dwyer Brothers Two Cement Barges Of This City Make Trip Up The Hudson River Through The Barge Canal to Detroit via Lake Erie.

The Detroit News of August 24 says: The first cargo from the Atlantic seaboard to reach Detroit in canal-lake barge bottoms arrived August 23, proving, according to those who predicted the practicability of ocean barge transportation on the Great Lakes, that canal-lake type barges solve an important transportation problem economically.

The barges Charles O'Connor and Thomas F. Brennan arrived at Water Works Park with a cargo of 1,254 tons of Portland cement from Waterford, N. Y. They left Watertown July 27 in tow of a tug, and experienced delay enroute owing to the inexperience of the tug pilots with the barges and the difficulty of making headway over a new route.

The barges mentioned are owned by Dwyer Brothers of this city, and an account of the proposed trip through the barge canal and Lake Erie was given in The Freeman at the time the boats left here.

After giving a description of the barges, which are each 116 feet long, 29 feet wide with a depth of 13 feet, the Detroit News says: The barges and tug left Watertown and went through the New York barge canal to Tonawanda, thence to Oneida, where they entered the Great Lakes through the Niagara river. At Buffalo they were met by a Great Lakes tug that brought them to Detroit.

Captain Joseph Miller of Kingston, a veteran salt water sailor, was in command of both craft. He described the trip as a complete novelty to himself and crew, consisting of L. D. Gorham, Rome, mate; Tom Aikens, Kingston; and Edward A. Tromley, Hudson Falls, sailors.

Captain Miller in describing the trip said that "We had an uneventful trip through the canal. When we got into fresh water at the Niagara river we began to experience the feelings of sailors in a new world. Navigation was so different it did not seem like the same old United States We left roomy salt water for cramped fresh water. Boats rubbed their sides against us. It took close figuring to prevent accidents.

"But we got real thrill on Lake Erie the night of August 22. A hawser that lashed the Brennan to the O'Connor broke. I was on board the Brennan when she went adrift. A storm was lashing Lake Erie at the time. We rolled about in the darkness and I saw the lights of the tug and the O'Connor fade out. I had supreme confidence in the barges because I knew they had been built solidly enough to withstand the buffeting of waves in New York Sound, but nevertheless it was a thrilling night for Aikens and myself. We kept a sharp lookout for the tug, which we saw could not get a line to us in that storm.

"When daylight came we saw the smoke of the tug, which was coming towards us. We simply rolled about until she got a line to us. We didn't get far out of our course despite the severity of the storm. It proved that our barges were sufficiently strong to withstand the average lake tempest. We reached port here shipshape."

The Detroit News also carried a picture of Captain Miller and Mate Aikens and the two barges.

Bar Clambake Uneventful.

The annual clambake of the Ulster County Bar Association at Cuneo's Casino at Lake Katrine on Saturday afternoon attracted a large number of lawyers of this city and from around the county. The bake was served in excellent style and was thoroughly enjoyed by the lawyers and their guests. There were few athletic contests afterward because most of the lawyers were disinclined to exercise heartily after the sumptuous repast.

ELKS CLAMBAKE A GREAT EVENT

Notable Not Only For Appetites of The Elks But For The Truly Wonderful Showing In Athletic Events.

About 350 men, everyone with an appetite, enjoyed the annual clambake and the athletic events of the Kingston Protective Order of Elks, held Sunday at the Fording place along the Esopus creek. Tony Kohl, who is the steward of the Elks Club, was master of ceremonies and John M. Schussler was in charge of the bake proper, being an expert in that line, and all who had the good fortune to partake of the feast will attest to its excellence. During the day and before the serving of the bakes, there being two, one at 3 o'clock and one at 5 o'clock, Steward Kohl had the Elks Club chef on duty making clam cakes and clam fritters for the Elks. The menu of the bake included, besides clams to the limit, soft shell crabs, steamed chicken, bluefish, lobster, sweet and white potatoes, bantam yellow corn, sliced tomatoes, Schusslers' famous clam sauce, watermelon, cantaloupe, and ice cream. There was full and plenty for all and everything was cooked to a nicety.

The athletic program consisted first of a baseball game between Darby Doyle's Colts and Tony Kohl's Regulars. The game broke up in a row at the end of the eighth inning when the score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Regulars because of Capt. Kohl objecting to a decision by Cy. Conners the umpire. He then declared the game forfeited to the Colts by a score of 9 to 0. The Colts rung in Columbus Carroll as their pitcher he being a semi-professional box artist, while Tony Kohl did the twirling for the Regulars, Louie Sapp being his catcher. Big John Simmons was on the receiving end for the Colts.

In the fat man's race Billy Cohen was the winner of the silk umbrella although John Simmons was the favorite but he was handicapped because of eating too many clams. Harry Keyser was third in the race.

The lunch kit was awarded to Dr. Fowler of McBride's drug store he winning the 440-yard run. It required three heats Fowler winning the first and third and Tony Kohl the second heat. Kohl was the favorite and his backers lost heavily. Kohl was awarded a fine water color as the second prize.

Dan Murphy as the winner of the broad jump making 9 feet and 4 inches. He got a silk shirt which was the prize. Tony Miranti of Shokan was second and was awarded a silk scarf.

Big John Simmons of the iron workers gang on the Rondout creek bridge won the prize, a cap, in the endurance race in which there were fifty starters, he enduring for over an hour a walk about the grounds.

The tree climbing contest for a $10 bill was won by Abram Handler who climbed a tree to a height of about forty feet without slipping back once, although the tree was given a frequent shaking by men who had bet that he would fail and were hard losers.

The wrestling match prize, a pair of slippers, was given Philip Fitzpatrick who threw Big John Simmons side hold, two out of three times.

The Elks returned back to town about 7:30 p. m., in autos and spent the next four hours at the Elks' Club house, Fair street, talking about the great success of the 1921 clambake and outing of the day.

McCall Introduces A New Printed School Pattern To Simplify The Teaching Of Sewing

Designed For Use In Sewing Schools

The new school pattern incorporates all the revolutionary features of the McCall "Printed" pattern which in itself would make it a pattern to be preferred by the beginner in sewing, but makes simplicity more simple by special features adapted to the problems of the beginners in sewing. The McCall pattern is the only school pattern on the market. Retail price is 20c. Teachers of domestic science will welcome this pattern for it will make the work of teaching very much simpler. The pattern is printed on a single piece so that in cutting it out the student will learn how the pattern parts go. One of the chief advantages to the school will be the time saved in the class room.

Twenty-one acres of lumber in the yards of Gibson & Son, Ltd., at Stratford, London, burned for more than six hours, baffling the attempts of the Fire Department to extinguish the blaze. Although Scotland Yard claims that the unemployed had nothing to do in connection with the fire, members of the firm insist that it was set on fire by some of the disappointed John applicants for the twenty odd jobs open at the lumber yard. In response to an advertisement calling for twenty porters, at $8 per week, 1,000 applicants appeared. The fire was discovered shortly after the twenty men selected had gone to work.

GERMAN NOBLES NO LONGER STRUT

Sons of Kaiser Become Models of Self-Effacement.

HOHENZOLLERNS ARE THROUGH

Former Royal Family Eliminated Definitely From German Rule—Even if Country Returned to Monarchial Form of Government No Member of the Former Kaiser's Family Would Be Considered for Job of Ruler—Parade Days Are Gone.

Royal peacockery as it appears in Germany today is a first-class study in self-effacement. It must be remembered that they are all there—all those princes and dukes and counts and barons whose names before the war were sprinkled copiously over the journals of many capitals. In the old days they were received everywhere. Hostesses were glad to get them. They were distinguished, good talkers and made excellent dinner party material. Then, too, the names always looked well in the society columns. And now that no mention of them is seen, even in the fatherland, it is only natural to wonder what has become of them and how they are assimilating the principles of life under democratic rule.

One day early in 1920 I went with a friend into Pelzer's restaurant, in Neue Wilhelmstrasse, where one can have uncensored drinks at uncensored hours. Alongside me at the bar, Gordon Stiles writes in the New York Tribune, stood a tall, somewhat dyspeptic-looking individual, who obviously took a great interest in our English conversation. His general appearance was that of an Englishman. He had the trailing, horseshoe mustache of the Briton and the pink roundness which no amount of starvation can knock out of the German was missing.

Yet there were about him certain undeniable Teutonic characteristics. His speech was that of a German aristocrat and when at times he forsook the support of the bar his manner and carriage became purely Prussian.

I asked him to have a drink with me. And he took me up.

Is the Kaiser's Nephew.

"Do you know who dot feller iss?" asked the bartender, after my late companion disappeared.

"No," I said. "Who is he?"

"Dot iss Prinz Albert von Schleswig-Holstein. He's der nephew of der kaiser by marriage. He ain't got no money no more. He lose it all in der war."

"How does he live?"

"Oh, dose fellers always lifs. He got a onkel what's a duke—der Duke von Schleswig-Holstein. He's der brudder-in-law of der kaiser an' he got plenty money. He gif Prinz Albert some, I tink."

Ernst Gunther, duke of Schleswig-Holstein, and brother of the late kaiserin, is the son of Duke Frederick. Despite the loss of his northern estate, he is wealthy. He makes his home in his magnificent castle in Silesia and leaves it only on such occasions as business requires his presence in Berlin.

The duke is a man of medium height, stockily built and erect in carriage. His white hair and beard—aided somewhat by gold-rimmed eyeglasses on a chain—gave him a distinguished and substantial appearance. He uses his glasses mostly for gesturing purposes, through the medium of the right hand.

Well, as I remarked above, the duke was full of troubles when I first saw him. He felt that he was the victim of a rough deal in connection with his Schleswig-Holstein property. Under the plebiscite terms all property owned by the reigning family or by any person who might be in line for the throne was slated for confiscation. And the duke felt that not only was he being treated unfairly by the allied powers, but declared he had been tricked by the Danish government.

His contention was that his estate came in the category of private property owned by a private individual and inasmuch as it had been announced that such property would be respected, he protested vigorously against the pending confiscation.

In the old days the duke was wont to travel with a host of retainers and whole floors at the smartest hotels of many cities were engaged far in advance. Now he contents himself with one secretary and his goings and comings are as unostentatious as possible.

Kaiser's Sons Muzzled.

Strange as it may seem, less is seen and heard of the kaiser's three sons remaining in Germany than of other royalty. I think I discovered the explanation of this during a protracted effort to interview Eitel Friedrich. It was explained that, while the prince might not object to expressing his views on current affairs, he virtually had been ordered by the socialist government to keep his mouth shut. He had been told that as long as he did so he would be unmolested, but that if he started airing his opinions for publication he would be placed under surveillance at once and kept there.

As a matter of fact, I do not think Eitel's opinions would be worth much, anyway. A fat, flabby body is topped off by a red, flabby face, which has about the same amount of expression as a chestnut slab. As near as I can make out, his entire repertoire consists of eating, sleeping, drinking and attending church on Sunday.

Adalbert and Oscar also live in Potsdam, but are seldom seen outside a small circle of intimates. Sometimes one or the other of them slips into Berlin for a day, but he does it without the sounding of trumpets and without notifying the communist leaders of his intentions.

They are wise in avoiding the proletariat as much as possible, because the Hohenzollern family has been eliminated definitely from German rule. Even if the country adopted a monarchial form of government, the people's choice of a regent would not fall upon any member of the late reigning family. But it is safe to say that outside of Prussia, 85 per cent of the people wish nothing more to do with kings and emperors. The picture of the kaiser slipping over the Dutch frontier, leaving his army in the lurch and avoiding the subsequent sufferings which Germany has undergone while he lived in comfort, is still fresh in the mind of the ordinary German.

Upon the attitude of the masses ex-royalty turns a haughty and more or less amused eye. Adversity has not lost to princes and dukes the power of looking at their alleged inferiors in a manner cold, crushing and contemptuous. The look seems to say, "Poor fools! Can't you see that we are only biding our time?" They poke fun at the efforts of the socialists to govern the country and appear to feel that a system more to their liking is bound to come about in time.

A Pseudo-Democrat.

Prince Reuss has plenty of money, derived from large land holdings in south Germany, and most of his time since 1918 has been spent in the gayest resorts of Berlin. I constantly ran upon him in such places as the Palais de Danse, the Hotel Adlon and the exclusive haunts with which Kurfurstendamm is lined.

Generally he is accompanied by a bejeweled woman and drinks great quantities of champagne. But at that he always appears bored and aimless—as if depressed by the futility of life. In common with many ex-imperial officers, Reuss served for a time in the Noske guard, not because he sympathized with the government, but because he knew that the success of the radicals would puncture any monarchistic bubble which might be in the blowing. He was in command of the armored cars when the Bolsheviki were routed in Magdeburg and Braunschweig.

Just before Prince Reuss left the Noske guard he invited me to be his first guest at a new apartment which he had fitted up near Bayerischerplatz, and I went out for coffee one afternoon.

Suddenly he jumped to his feet. "Would you like to see my peace-time uniform?" he said. Almost before I had told him yes he was out of the room. Ten minutes later he rattled into my presence in a perfect blaze of glory. White tunic, trimmed with scarlet, shiny black riding boots, jingling spurs and jeweled sword. He was complete and the uniform was magnificent. Its wearer stamped up and down, looking like another man.

Parade Days Gone.

"Ah," he said. "Those were the days. And we did look smart on parade." He glanced again at the photograph gallery and his voice dropped and filled with emotion as he continued, "But it's gone; it's all gone. What are we now in this green stuff we wear? We look like a 3-ring circus!" He finished with a contemptuous smile.

Prince Reuss has a cousin, Prince Hohenlohe, who, after the downfall of the monarchy, developed into one of the weirdest characters in Berlin. In fact, so weird did he become that last year he took up his abode in a sanatorium, where they keep folks under mild restraint, and he still is there, so far as I know.

Hohenlohe up to last summer was a familiar figure at Berlin's fancy gathering places. Once seen he is not forgotten. He is very tall, with no particular breadth, and wears elegant clothes.

Having on an occasion an opportunity to steer his highness up against the despised proletariat, I picked one of the low spots, a little restaurant dance hall, the proprietress of which was a little red-haired woman, whose name was Mary. She once kept a sailors' boarding house in the Argentine, and I think it unnecessary to say more.

In an aside to Mary I explained the rank of my companion and then introduced him. He stiffened up, clicked his heels together, and Mary curtsied so low that I thought she never would rise again. But she made it and later pulled herself together sufficiently to superintend the cooking of some of the best food to be had in Berlin. That was how the prince came to eat.

The wine was good and after awhile the prince asked Mary to dance. She returned from the floor breathless and flustered. "Ach," she said, "to think that little Mary has danced with a prince! Just to think of it!" As for the prince, it was such a treat to see him going through the rollicking and devastating German foxtrot and starring at his partner with the same look which he might have bestowed upon his executioner, come to lead him to the gallows.

There is a distinct difference between the attitude of German men toward ex-royalty and German women. The former appear to find a grim satisfaction in the downfall of their former superiors. The latter show evidences of a feeling of pity. The average girl is flattered by any attentions bestowed upon her by crushed royalty.

Changing Colors of Gems.

Experiments have proved that it is possible to change the color of certain precious and semi-precious stones by exposing them to the action of radium. A scientist put a number of sapphires of different kinds into a bag that contained a small quantity of radium. A month later the white sapphires had become yellow, the blue sapphires, green; the wine-colored sapphires, red, and the dark blue sapphires, violet.

SCIENTIST GETS DOPE ON LIZARDS

Dartmouth Professor Has Big Collection of Specimens.

AUTHORITY ON VERTEBRATES

Recognized Throughout the World as Leading Authority on Evolution of Vertebrates — His Investigations Throw Much Light on Some Ancient Structures and Functions of the Human Body—Gathers Specimens in Out-of-the-Way Places.

There is a sting in the air that sweeps down from the north over the plains of Hanover and lounging lizards lurk and leer in the light and learning of Dartmouth's academic groves. How and why one of the Dartmouth faculty brought more lizards to Hanover and got more sting from the south into his otherwise peaceful study than either he or his wife intended has been told by Prof. William Patten, professor of biology at Dartmouth.

He has worked many years on the evolution of vertebrates and is recognized throughout the biological world as the leading authority on this subject. His work on fossils, fishes and the embryology of various living animals has enabled him to reconstruct in a wholly new way the genealogical tree of the animal kingdom and to trace the evolution of man down to the lowest kind of animals.

Throws Light on Many Things.

This revolutionary work is sure to yield important results for it throws much needed light on some very ancient structures and functions of the human body that have been very puzzling to medical men. Professor Patten reconstructed a little known group of fossils called ostracoderms and he discovered that this class formed a new class of animals connecting the lowest fish-like vertebrates with the invertebrates.

Professor Patten also showed that the ostracoderms were near relatives of the giant sea scorpions which were the kingpins of the animal world 50,000,000 years ago, more or less.

These two great classes proved to be the real missing links in evolution for they filled in by far what was the widest gap in man's ancestral history. The nearest living survivors of these very ancient animals are the little land scorpions, found everywhere in the tropics, and limulus, the familiar horseshoe crab of our Atlantic sea shores.

For this reason the limulus have long been a favorite study with Professor Patten, for it now gives us the best picture of high life as it was many millions of years ago. These facts have been fully and clearly set forth in his new book on "The Evolution of the Vertebrates and Their Kin."

This long and careful study of the larger factors in evolution forms his new book on "The Grand Strategy of Evolution," which is classed by leading biologists throughout the country as one of the most significant and original contributions to biology that has appeared for years.

For these reasons Professor Patten, accompanied by Mrs. Patten, has made numerous trips to out-of-the-way places in the world in order to collect scorpions' eggs and other unusual things to assist him in his study.

On his recent trip to Costa Rica he obtained all the scorpions he needed for his work.

Collected Plenty of Scorpions.

A few pennies were sufficient to induce native women, men and children to capture these much dreaded animals and to bring them alive to his improvised laboratory, where the eggs in all stages of development were removed, treated with special chemicals and preserved for further study.

Many other things of interest to biologists were obtained, such as birds, butterflies, reptiles and Indian pottery. Living in the treetops of the Central American jungle is a peculiar species of large lizard called iguana, possibly the prototype of the fabled basilisk and cockatrice. They have a curious little eye in the middle of the head like that of the scorpions. A rudiment of such an eye is still present in man, but concealed in the brain.

These extraordinary creatures form a favorite food for the natives. Professor Patten shot four of them just before leaving Costa Rica and brought them to Hanover on ice. He also brought back to Hanover some live scorpions and kept them for a while in a little glass dish on his study table until one day most of them unfortunately escaped. At last accounts they were still running about among the professor's books anxiously pursued by the professor's wife, armed with a pair of forceps.

But the professor assures his friends that while the sting of a scorpion may be painful for a short time and always somewhat discomforting, it is not fatal. Mrs. Patten was also greatly relieved to learn that they will not live long or multiply rapidly. Dartmouth undergraduates don't mind a few "lizards" on the campus.

Heart Beats After Breathing Stopped.

Doctors in London, England, gave Leo Major an anesthetic. He stopped breathing, but his heart kept on beating. A pulmotor failed to restore his breath. After seven and one-half hours, heart action also ceased.

Equals Twenty Tunnels.

The two enormous masonry-faced steel towers supporting the contemplated bridge connecting Manhattan with Jersey City will each of them be 840 feet high, or 48 feet taller than the Woolworth building.

The upper deck of the bridge, over which will flow all the automobile and motortruck traffic, will accommodate as many moving vehicles as ten two-track tubes such as the pair soon to be built under the Hudson river at Canal street, at a cost of $150,000,000.

The lower deck will carry ten railroad tracks.

The bridge is expected to cost $110,000,000. Tunnels under the river, equivalent to the bridge in traffic capacity, would, it is estimated, cost two and a half times as much. Not fewer than 20 of them would be required.

Artificial Limbs of Metal.

At St. Thomas' hospital, London, Dr. Edred M. Corner, one of the most famous surgeons in England, has been conducting experiments with light metal artificial limbs on soldiers who had lost limbs during the war and whose recovery had been slow. These show that about 90 per cent of thigh amputations can advantageously be fitted with light artificial limbs, with which the men are able to walk with less fatigue and more satisfaction.

Memoriam.

In sacred memory of my beloved wife, Frances, who entered into life everlasting one month ago.

One long month ago today
My dear wife went away to stay,
We were so happy, how could I know
My joy so soon must turn to woe,
But the Heavenly Father called her
And we said "Thy will be done."
For I knew that He alone could heal
And keep my darling one.
CHARLES E. BISHOP, Husband.

In loving memory of our dearly beloved daughter and sister, Mae E. Hein, who entered eternal life August 29, 1920.

After suffering and pain
She is now at rest;
Though we loved her so dearly
Our Saviour knew best,
For weeks she prayed
For the Lord to decide,
And then God called her
With Him to abide.

STREET RACERS FINED $10 EACH

Philip Rucker And Abraham Singer Were Caught Racing Automobiles On Strand—Other Cases In Police Court.

Philip Tucker and Abraham Singer, two chauffeurs, were caught racing their automobiles through the Strand in Ponckhockie several days ago by Officer Hess, and were placed under arrest. The hearing was adjourned until this morning when both pleaded guilty, and were fined $10 each. Since the summer season opened at Kingston Point Park there has been considerable reckless driving through the Strand to the park, but fortunately so far no one has been killed or injured. The auto drivers appear to have absolutely no regard for the rights of pedestrians and drive their cars at from 25 to 40 or more miles an hour.

Harry Krom of Rifton was fined $3 this morning for driving on the left side of a police standard at the Strand and Hasbrouck avenue. He was arrested Sunday by Officer Robert Healey.

Joseph Huber of Saugerties, who parked his car on John street in the restricted area was arrested Saturday night was discharged today with a reprimand.

Smoking Is American Habit.

Many efforts have been made to show that the use of tobacco was known to the ancient Greeks and Egyptians, but they never have been successful. The belief is generally accepted that the American aborigines were the first to make use of the weed and that Columbus was the first man to chronicle its use.

Remove Grease Before Lacquering.

It is possible to protect polished metal surfaces by applying several coats of cold lacquer or celluloid varnish. The lacquer should be applied with a brass camel's hair brush, after the metal has been highly polished. There must be no trace of grease on the brass or other metal when it is lacquered.

SMITH FINDS ANOTHER PLOT

This One Is a Complicated System by "Food Trust" to Destroy New York City Market Department.

Raymond Smith, formerly of Kingston, who has had wide experience in investigating various public officials, is deputy commissioner of markets under Commissioner Edwin J. O'Malley of New York city, whose department has been under fire for several weeks in connection with graft disclosures before the Meyer legislative committee which is investigating the Hylan administration.

Mr. Smith charges that the committee's attack on the markets department is the result of an effort of a so-called food trust to destroy the department.

In answer to Smith's charge, members of the Meyer committee on Sunday pointed out as strange that although O'Malley and Smith say they have known this for three years, they have waited until this moment to rush the facts before the public.

One member of the committee is quoted by the Tribune as saying:

"And you must remember, too, that Smith is now a deputy commissioner of markets, and that what he said was nothing more than a mere glittering generality, not mentioning the name of one stand holder in any market whom he would be willing to tie up with any packer.

Besides, Smith says that the stands in a great number of cases were obtained for these merchants by agents of the packers. From whom did these agents get these stalls, and how did they get them for these merchants? O'Malley has said that he himself is solely responsible for the issuance of all market permits. Maybe when he takes the witness stand he will be able to throw some light on these questions. If what Smith says is true."

According to the Tribune, Smith told Commissioner of Accounts Horschfield, who is also conducting an investigation, that he had been a former examiner for the United Federal Trade Commission and an agent for the American Livestock Association. Despatches from Chicago Sunday quoted Vice-President O'Donnell and Secretary T. W. Tomlinson of the association as saying that they did not know of any Raymond Smith. They said that he certainly was not authorized to speak for the association.

Disclosure before the Meyer committee last week included testimony regarding the withdrawal of $3,000 from a bank by one of the stand holders in one of the markets just before visiting the office of Commissioner O'Malley and subsequent erasures on his check book and account books after he had been served with a subpoena to appear before the committee.

While in Kingston Smith was secretary to Judge Hasbrouck. After leaving Kingston he was employed as investigator at Albany and since then has been mentioned in connection with facts unearthed from files of private correspondence of public officials. About a year ago he visited Kingston and announced that he was traveling for Boston manufacturers of jam.

Plan Shrines to Burroughs.

The John Burroughs Memorial association has started its campaign to raise funds to purchase and maintain the various properties of the late naturalist. It is estimated it will take about $38,000 to purchase them, and an additional $4,000 to maintain them the first year.

The association intends to maintain the Burroughs properties as the naturalist himself maintained them. His working library, some of his original manuscripts, rifles, shotguns and fishing tackle will be exhibited. It is the opinion of the association that shrines to great men, especially shrines to literary men, are too few, and that the many friends and admirers of John Burroughs will be interested in keeping up the places in which he lived, studied and labored in the 84 years of his life. It hopes to raise funds to maintain these properties by popular subscription.—New York Times.

Waterproof Matches.

Campers and picnickers will hail with delight the new waterproof match, which can be easily made at home in the following way: Melt a few lumps of candle wax in an old can on the stove. Allow this to cool a little and then, before it has set, dip the matches in, one at a time. Treat the heads and about half of the wooden part. Place the matches on one side to cool. Matches treated in this simple manner have been soaked in water for many hours, and they have ignited as readily as those which were perfectly dry. The only difference is that, in striking, it is needful to do so a trifle more firmly so as to get through the thin film of wax surrounding the head. When once the flame starts, the match burns very readily, owing to the wax which has adhered to the wood. Any ordinary matches can be treated in the manner described.

Ants Make Biscuits.

According to recent studies of the common Mediterranean ant, the seeds which are collected are kept for a time dry and are eventually put out in the rain so that they begin to germinate. This has the advantage of bursting the hard seed-coats, and in some cases of starting processes of fermentation. At a certain stage, however, the ants kill the embryo plant by biting off the radicle or other parts and the seeds are dried again in the sun. According to Neger the dried seeds of some leguminous plants, for instance, are then taken back into the nest and chewed into dough. This is dried once again in the sun in the form of biscuits, which are eventually put into the cupboard.

LAST GOSPEL MEETING BEST

The series of gospel services conducted in the open air by the Young Men's Christian Association during the months of July and August have met with good success. Much credit is due to the co-operation of the pastors of the various churches and to the volunteer workers who assisted in so many different ways.

The service conducted Sunday evening was the best attended of any and with the song service in charge of Charles H. Knight everything went well. Mr. Knight mentioned that it was forty years ago when Moody and Sankey were in Kingston and that some of the choir that he drilled at that time were present in the audience.

The enthusiasm and earnestness that he still shows proves that he has lost none of his old time qualities as a gospel leader. He was assisted by Richard Dawe who sang two solos which were greatly appreciated by all present.

The speaker of the evening was the Rev. A. A. Zabriskie, retired. His voice was clear and the audience had no difficulty in hearing him. Mr. Zabriskie is a forceful speaker and and he brought a message of cheer and comfort to all. He described very clearly how man was saved through the power of Jesus Christ and emphasized that these were the days when we need to give more heed to the things of the Kingdom of God.

As far as known now it will be the plan to conduct these meetings next summer. During the winter months the religious work committee of the Association are planning on conducting Bible classes and services of different kind.

William H. Gibson, who served on the Ashokan commission with Philip Elting of this city and the late George Deyo of Ellenville, died suddenly at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club at Tarrytown on Saturday afternoon. Accompanied by R. C. Lee of New York city, Mr. Gibson had played nine holes of the course when he spoke of a pain over his heart and then fell to the ground. Mr. Lee and others carried him to the club house where he died before the arrival of a doctor. Death was due to acute indigestion. Mr. Gibson was seventy-three years old. He was a lawyer by profession and practiced in New York city, where he also was interested in a large cold storage warehouse. He was appointed an Ashokan commissioner by Judge Hasbrouck, but after serving several years, resigned. He was succeeded by Abel I. Smith of New York, who with Messrs. Elting and Deyo, continued to serve until the work of the commission finally was completed. Mr. Gibson was an entertaining talker and a keen business man. He was actively interested in various civic organizations in New York city, where he had many friends. He is survived by his widow and two children. His funeral will take place from his late residence, No. 57 Neperhan road, Tarrytown, on Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 29.—The stock market showed an irregular tone at the beginning of business today with only slight changes in most of the active issues. Manhattan Railway guaranteed stock was off 5½ points on the news of the Interborough Rapid Transit receivership, while Interborough Consolidated stock was down ⅛ of a point and the preferred showed a loss of 1⅛ at 8. U. S. Steel selling ex-dividend was ⅛ higher at 73½. Famous Players started ½ lower at 59½ while Mexican Petroleum showed a gain of ½ at 94½. Marine preferred was 1⅛ points higher at 39⅞ and Bethlehem Steel "B" showed a gain of ¼ at 48⅝. General Electric was 2¼ points higher at 119⅝ while Studebaker was ⅝ lower at 68½.

After the display of strength in the first fifteen minutes, the market showed a receding tendency, specialties including the motor groups coming into prominence and being offered at substantial declines in large volume. Chandler motors fell 2⅜ to 39⅜ and Studebaker yielded over 2 points to 67½. Sears Roebuck, after moving up ⅝ to 63⅜, was pressed on the market and yielded to 61½. The Interborough issues continued heavy, Manhattan Guaranteed selling down to 35⅜, a loss of nearly 10 points. American Sugar Refining was another weak feature, ranging from 61⅜ to 59, new low since 1891. U. S. Steel reacted from 73⅞ to 73¼. Northern Pacific was ½ lower at 72.

Increased strength was shown in the market in the afternoon when Mexican Petroleum made a further advance of over one point selling at 98¼ and General Electric moved up to 121½ a gain of four points. That stock was in such urgent demand in the loan crowd that it loaned at ⅛ premium. Railroad stocks became prominent, Northern Pacific moving up over two points to above 74 and Reading advanced over one point to 66⅝. U. S. Rubber first preferred was another strong feature making a gain of over two points to 78½. Manhattan Guaranteed which sold at 35⅜ in the first hour rose to 38.

The market closed irregular today; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

How to Tell.

It is quite easy to tell how long a man has been married by the way he speaks to his wife. If he says "My darling wife," that means three months; "wifey," six months; "the wife," one year; "Mrs. Brown," two or three years; "the missus," five or six years; "mother," seven years; "my better half," ten years; "the old lady," twenty years; "grandma," twenty-five years; "Mrs. Brown," forty-two years; "Jane," fifty years.—Portland Oregonian.

ABBE SELLS QUAINT MOTOR TO AID POOR

Paris Derides Venerable Automobile, but Relic Goes at Limousine Price.

Paris saw what is asserted to be the oldest motor car the other day when this vehicle, known as L'Ancetre, passed slowly and noisily by the Arc de Triomphe and down the Champs Elysees, recalling the early 90's when the first automobile rattled, puffed and stank along the same street. The old car looked odd beside the limousines in the boulevards and the curiosity of the crowds was mingled with amusement as they watched the veteran being oiled up and started. Once it got under way it moved along with a certain stately grotesqueness that reminded one a bit of the furious ambulations of that quaint old man in Holmes' "The Last Leaf."

But the wonder of L'Ancetre is not so much that it still exists but that it has done useful service from the time of its birth 29½ years ago to the present day. The old automobile belongs to the Abbe Gavois, a white-haired priest of Rennevillo in the department of the Somme, who has used it for many years in going about to visit his parishioners and attending to his many duties.

On its wooden wheels without tires the car bore the venerable priest from house to house at a speed never greater than six miles an hour, but to the many offers from would-be purchasers the abbe shook his head, declaring that L'Ancetre, like himself, was still able to do its bit in a modest way.

But finally the sight of so much suffering among the poor gave an idea to the old abbe. When there are so many who have nothing why should he ride about in an automobile? With a little sacrifice he could do much good. So he has decided finally to sell L'Ancetre, so that he can use the proceeds to aid the poor. And when he was told that the relic would bring probably as much as the price of a new modern automobile the abbe appeared tremendously pleased. The thought of being able to do so much good will make it quite easy hereafter for him to walk from house to house in his parish.

NOTED POLISH PATRIOT NOW AN ALMOND GROWER

All the world knows Paderewski, greatest of pianists, composer and statesman. To history belongs the glorious epic of Paderewski, the musician, transformed into Paderewski, the statesman, most vital of the forces that restored independence to his beloved Poland. But you do not know Paderewski unless it has been your good fortune to observe him in rapt contemplation of the mysteries of the growth of young almond trees. Paderewski is now an almond grower in California and takes a keen interest in everything pertaining to that industry.

TO RETURN MOGUL JEWELS

Were Stolen When Delhi Was Sacked in 1739—Made in 1650.

London is returning to India two famous Mogul jewels which have shared adventures with the celebrated Kohinoor diamond. The jewels are to be restored to one of the great Indian museums, and Delhi has been suggested as their eventual resting place.

The jewels were made for the Mogul Emperor Shah Jehan about 1650. After the sack of Delhi in 1739 these and other treasures were carried off by the ruler of Persia and Afghanistan, Nadir Shah; the fugitive Shah Sujah restored them to Ranjit Singh at Lahore in 1813; in 1849 they were bought by the governor general of that time, Lord Dalhousie, eventually passing to his daughter, and after her death to the Victoria and Albert museum, in London.

Each jewel is carved from a single stone. One is an emerald bow ring intended to protect the left thumb when a strained bow string is released, and the other is an emerald toilet cup, mounted in gold jeweled with rubies, the foot being chased and partly enameled with translucent gold enamel.

LITTLE GIRL MAKES RECORD AS GRADUATE

Betty Jane Hamilton, at the Age of Twelve, Gets Out of High School With Honors.

Graduating from the New Castle high school at the age of twelve years was the record-shattering precedent that was established in western Pennsylvania by Miss Betty Jane Hamilton of New Castle, Pa.

Miss Betty completed the entire grade school course and the four-year high school course and landed in the honor class, among the graduates, when commencement night arrived.

This is probably a record that will stand for many years in this city, and perhaps in the nation, for that matter. For the past two years students have stepped out of the New Castle high school at the age of fourteen years, but the record for graduating at twelve far eclipses the mark set by the fourteen-year-olders.

Last year the student who was graduated from the New Castle high school at the age of fourteen years, passed the entrance examinations and entered Harvard university last fall. He was Herbert Hoffielt.

Two years ago the local student who achieved a diploma at the age of fourteen was Edmond Hamilton, a brother of Betty Jane. He at that time held the record, but his younger sister has far outdistanced him. He entered Westminster college and is making good as a collegiate student. His sister also expects to enter the same institution and will add to her laurels by enrolling in college classes of a first rate institution at the age of thirteen. Her birthday is in July.

Miss Betty Jane is no lop-sided student either, as in addition to going through the high school classes in record time she studied music consistently as a side issue and is interested in other girl activities of her neighborhood.

All in all, the last three years has developed a remarkable trio of students in New Castle. Perhaps no school in the nation can lay claim to any such record.

"SAVIOR OF LONDON" HAS NEW INVENTION

John Ponderoy, "the savior of London," who arrived in San Francisco from Australia on his way home. He invented the explosive bullet that kept the Zeppelins from doing more damage to it than they did. The British government gave him a reward of $125,000. He produced six other war inventions and while in America will do some negotiating at Washington with the United States. He gives all his credit to his wife, whom Great Britain decorated and presented with a $25,000 bonus.

WEDDED ISOLATED GIRL.

Pane of Glass Shielded Bridegroom and Priest From Fever Germs.

Miss Kate O'Brien of Philadelphia and Charles Barker of Vancouver, B. C., were married in Moosejaw the other day by Rev. Father O'Brien of Boston, through a sheet of glass which prevented the scarlet fever, which the bride had contracted, reaching the bridegroom and priest.

Miss O'Brien left Philadelphia about a week ago to be married in this city, but contracted fever en route and had to leave the train at Moosejaw. Barker left for that town at once on learning of the trouble and insisted that there be no postponement of the wedding.

The girl was moved to a room and a speaking tube inserted in the wall for the priest, who married the wants of the bride by mode of the head.

The mother has been watched for, but has never reappeared.

Center of Perfume Industry.

SOLDIERS SALUTE KINGSTON HOSTS

The Freeman has been requested to publish the following:

We the disabled soldiers who have been enjoying in full your hospitality and are about to leave your city, wish to make known to the people of Kingston the value we have derived from our stay. We all agree that our stay has worked wonders, physically. We also feel a very keen appreciation of the friendly, patriotic spirit in which we were welcomed and entertained.

To those Kingstonians who arranged dinners, dances, entertainments, picnics and rides, and other forms of pleasure too numerous to mention individually, we offer our wholehearted thanks. Mere words, however, seem inadequate as a means of expressing our appreciation of Mrs A. Knauth's public spirited sacrifice of her home for our comfort; also Dr. E. A. Dederer's and Mrs. T. Bridges's tender and sympathetic care of us while here.

Kingston, we salute you.

Both cars were west bound and the Studebaker pushed the Ford from the road and then followed over the bank. The Ford car was owned by William C. Fielder of New York city, and neither he or his wife and two children were injured, but several of the Cuban tourists in the Studebaker were cut and bruised and one woman sustained a compound fracture of one leg.

Turn and Turn About.

Prof. Nicholas Roerich, the Russian painter who refused the post of minister of fine arts in the Lenin government and who is now in the United States, tells an amusing story of the initiation of the soviet system in the imperial opera. The entire staff of the opera house in Moscow, directors, scene painters, singers, were instructed that thereafter all were to be treated on an equal basis, no one being considered better than another, and all to receive the same wage. It may be imagined that the temperamental stars did not receive this without emotion. On the night of the next performance the tenor in the leading role could not be found and a frantic search was made while the audience waited. Finally he was discovered by an amazed manager selling programs in the lobby.

"What madness, is this?" shouted the manager. "Don't you know we are holding the curtain for you?"

"Ah," answered the singer with ironic sweetness, "you see we are all equal now. Tonight I sell the programs. Let one of the others sing my role."

Crack Poughkeepsie Team Fails to Stop Colonials' Steam Roller—Culloton's Hurling in the Pinches Turned Them Back.

Colonials, 5, Poughkeepsie Regulars, 2.

These figures tell the story of Saturday's game, the most exciting contest staged at the Athletic Field this year. It was the first meeting of the season beween the two teams, and incidentally the Colonials' first game in the Hudson Valley Semi-Pro League. The Poughkeepsie Club came to Kingston determined to put an end to the Colonials' winning streak, but found themselves up against a better team.

In "Bud" Culloton, mighty hurler of the local club, the Bridge City representatives ran up against a stone wall. Time and time again a Poughkeepsie batter faced Culloton but in every instance except one when a hit would have scored a run, "Bud" was master of the situation. And then it was a little infield tap—a hit that Rice fielded cleanly but could not get across to first in time—that gave the Regulars a chance to score. Eleven strike outs and ten men left on bases is proof of "Bud's" effectivenes in the pinches.

Deegan was another player whose work stood out brilliantly. Matty was all over the field, gobbling up hot grounders and short flies with equal ease. Rice had nothing to do in the field, but his two hits came at opportune moments and drove two runs across the plate.

When Umpire Jordan called "Play Ball" at 3:40 p. m., the largest crowd of the season was on hand. The playing field was entirely surrounded by fans, and ground rules were made necessary. A hit into the crowd in either right or left field, or on over throw to first or third, went for two bases.

Dewey, the first Poughkeepsie man to face Culloton, could not solve "Bud's" twisters and struck out. Luck was with Stanley, however, and he beat out an infield tap. Norton also was dazzled by Culloton's speed and followed Dewey to the bench. Ed. Phelan, clean-up man and slugger extraordinary of Whetmore's crew, now approached the plate. "Bud" whizzed them over so fast for Ed. that the big first baseman did not even get a foul tip, making the third strike out of the inning, while the crowd gave vent to its approval.

It was a different thing in the Kingston half of the first, and Elmer Beecher, the lanky spitballer who worked for the visitors, got a taste of what was in store for him. Fitzgerald greeted Beecher with a Texas Leaguer over second. A hit and run play went wrong, however, and Leo was thrown out trying to make second. Moore got a hit when his grounder took a high bound over Beecher's head, and Dewey was given an error when he threw wild to first on the play. Moore going to second. Jack Robins got back into his batting stride with a hit to left, Moore going to third. Deegan then raised a high fly which Stanley captured, and Moore was doubled up when he tried to make home after the catch.

Only three men faced Culloton in the Poughkeepsie half of the second, but what an inning it proved for the Colonials! Connors went out on strikes, but Beecher couldn't find the plate for Schirick and the Kingston captain went to first. Schwab followed with a hit to right, and Schirick went to second. Artie Rice slammed out a single, scoring Schirick, the crowd going wild with joy. Culloton kept up the fusillade by driving a hot single over second, sending Schwab over the plate.

By this time the bewildered Poughkeepsie players decided to hold a conference among themselves, at the same time giving Beecher a breathing spell. When they decided to resume play Fitzgerald gave them something else to think about by lacing out a two-bagger, sending Rice and Culloton home with runs three and four. Moore and Robins went out, ending the inning.

Beecher got a single in the Regulars' half of the third, but was forced by Dewey.

Freddie Dahn, former captain of the Bonackers and now left fielder of the Poughkeepsie team, robbed Cy Connors of a hit by a wonderful one-hand catch in the Kingston end of the third. The big crowd cheered Dahn to the echo, and he was forced to doff his cap many times in response to the generous applause.

Both sides went along without any more scoring until the sixth, when Kingston added another run. With one down Schirick poled out a two bagger. Schwab went out, but Rice duplicated Schirick's hit and drove the captain over the rubber.

Culloton's exhibition of pitching in the seventh inning was as fine a performance as has beeen seen on the local diamond in many a season. Carpenter, first up, led off with a single. Sheldon followed with another. Carpenter going to second. Beecher, who had hit safely in both of his previous attempts, was now up. "Bud" put every ounce of steam he possessed behind the ball, and Beecher went out on strikes. Dewey, lead-off man, followed. He, too, fell a victim to the Fordhamite's cunning, and took three vain swings at the ball. Stanley caught hold of a fast one and sent it to center field for a single, and fast fielding by Fitzgerald held Carpenter on third. Three men on and two out. Norton at bat. He raised a high fly which Deegan caught, and the crowd breathed easy again.

The Poughkeepsie rooters—and there were plenty of them on the field—got their only chance to cheer in the eighth. Two were down when Esterly scratched a little infield hit. Carpenter followed with a single. Two men on and two out—the situation of the seventh repeated. But this time Sheldon hit a terrific drive between Schwab and Fitzgerald for three bases, sending Esterly and Carpenter over the plate. Sheldon was stranded on third when Beecher went out, and the scoring for the day was over.

CLOSE INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE FINISH

This is the final week in the Industrial baseball schedule and two of the games, notably the U. & D. vs. Silk Mills and Lace Mills vs. Peter Schuyler, are being followed with keen interest as the outcome of these games decide the places of honor in the league. A tie and perhaps a double tie may develop. If the U. & D. win from the Silk Mills on Tuesday evening, the two teams are tied for first place. Correspondingly if Peter Schuyler wins from Lace Mills on Friday, a tie will result for third place. The U. & D. game on Tuesday, of course, holds first interest. Joe Long's crack aggregation have a hard fight and much depends on the battery. As yet it has not been learned whom he will put on the mound. The regular Silk Mill line-up will be in order, with Hoffman and Roosa as battery. Following is the week's schedule of games:

Aug. 29—Willite vs. Silk Mills.
Aug. 30—U. & D. vs. Eilk Mills.
Sept. 2—Willite vs. Grocers.
Sept. 2—Lace Mills vs. Peter Schuyler, Hasbrouck Park.

Stanisburg Defeated at Rhinebeck.

The Stanisburg baseball team met a defeat for the second time this year at Rhinebeck Sunday afternoon by the score of 2 to 1. Although the Rhinebeck team scored in the first inning the Stanisburg could not score until the ninth. Stanisburg at one time had three men on bases but the next three players struck out. There was a large crowd of rooters for both sides and the game was very interesting all through the nine innings. The Stanisburgs defeated the Rhinebeck team on their home grounds three weeks ago, and now the scores stand 1 and 1. The third game will probably be played at Rhinebeck during the Dutchess county fair. Kid Taylor of Rhinebeck was in the box for the Stanisburgs.

WALLKILL VALLEY TEAM LINE-UP

There is going to be some game at Forsyth Park Wednesday afternoon when the baseball tossers from the Rondout Valley cross bats with the Wallkill Valley team. Wednesday afternoon has been selected as the time as this is the day of the big picnic of the Farm and Home Bureau and the Chamber of Commerce. The game will be called at 3:30.

The line-up of the Rondout Valley team was disclosed Saturday afternoon and now the Wallkill Valley line-up has been made known. It includes Forsyth of New Paltz, who will serve 'em up while Walsh of the same town will be on the receiving end; Clarence Rank, 1b; Gibbons, ss; McHugh, 2b; Lyons, lf, Finch, cf; Bevier, rf; and Charles Rank, to complete the line-up. The Wallkill Valley players claim to be the best team in New York state. While the Rondout Valley team makes no boast and claims no championship they expect to be able to hold down the Wallkill Valley ball tossers and carry off the long end of the score.

Cause of Rainbow.

The rainbow is caused by the rays of the sun passing through drops of water and being separated by these drops into the primary colors. A similar effect can be obtained by placing a triangular piece of glass before the eyes in the sunlight.
